Allah, Allah, Airplane.
The Feminine Mind.
Rules to Be Broken.
Summer Goes, Senate Comes.

—By Arthur Brisbane.—

THE Arabs of Hebron apologize for killing 45 Jews. 13 of them Americans. That does not do the dead much good, but it is a good sign.

Hebron Arabs, bringing vegetables and cattle to the Jerusalem market as usual, on Tuesday, found no buyers among the Jews, and had to sell at painfully low prices to Arabs.

Perhaps that made them apologetic.

Also the presence of British airplanes zooming overhead, conveniently close to the holy mosque of Omar, and, delightfully irony, a battery of British cannon located on the Mount of Olives, threatening the sacked mosque and the Mohammedan quarter, may have a discouraging effect.

Mohammedan children going to school sing: "The Rivers of Paradise as they Flow, Murmur Allah, Allah. The Angels in Paradise as they walk sing Allah, Allah."

At present the Arabs are not singing Allah, but talking airplanes, different and painfully real.

The International Congress of Psychology learns that married life brings the male mind closer to the feminine mind.

Investigation of "sex differences primarily non-intellectual," says Dr. Erman, shows that married life weakens "mental masculinity."

Naturally and fortunately. Men were once all cannibals, all murderers, all thieves. To meet a stranger was to kill him, or run so that he wouldn't kill you. Women had to change that, gradually, in their husbands and in their little boys also. They have done it partly. Much work remains for the feminine mind.

A passenger on the Zeppelin remarked: "Rules were meant to be broken," and secretly smoked a cigar, bringing flame within touching distance of the Zeppelin's highly explosive gas bag.

One spark would have blown everybody on board to destruction.

That American passenger's motto that: "Rules were meant to be broken" is quite American, beginning in respectable quarters with contempt for the Constitution, reaching all the way to the gunman in the gutter and the fool in the Zeppelin.

Summer is gone, the Senate is sitting discussing tariff and 120,000,000 Americans that eat sugar, beet sugar men, Louisiana sugar men, sugar growers of the whole world, are interested in sugar.

A high sugar tariff really means protection, a national subsidy of many millions for employers of Asiatic labor in Hawaii and the Philippines.

Sugar comes free from those places, belonging to Uncle Sam Asiatics do the work, their employers get the profit. Not much of it will go to sugar growers on this continent.

Our friend Cuba, good customer and good neighbor, would be ruined by a high tariff, if anything could ruin so plucky a people.

St. John Ervine, British, urges Britons, men and women, to come to America and "preserve the Nordic race."

He is afraid of Latin-Slav dominations "in the states."

There are good female jobs here, he says, and 40,000 British and Northern Irish girls should come, get the jobs and, contributing Nordic babies, keep this country from becoming Latin or Slav.

Mr. Ervine's plan would interest Christopher Columbus who was not Nordic, but partly Spanish and partly Jewish.

The learned Judge Halstead L. Ritter, from Florida, sitting temporarily in New York, says prohibition will win in the end, "spectacles will close when public sentiment forces official action."

The question is WHEN.

Judge Ritter says Florida, seat of bootlegger activities, has a great inclinator into which are dumped cars after case of liquor. Bottles break, alcohol spills, "flames shoot 40 feet into the air."

"I've got 40,000 bottles of foreign liquor waiting for the inclinator, now. It is quite a spectacle."

The judge is a dry.

NEW ANTI-WAR PACT URGED BY FRANCE

Treaty Would Link America to World Council; Makes Ardent Peace Plea

Geneva, Sept. 5.—Aristide Briand, premier of France, today stirred the Council of the League of Nations to wild enthusiasm when he advanced a new plan for outlawing war.

As a means of strengthening the Kellogg pact and the League covenant, M. Briand proposed a treaty to prevent war under which all signatories would agree to accept recommendations of the League Council as to what should be done when war became a menace or had actually broken out.

This means that if the United States should adhere to such a

May Make Smith U.S. Senator

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—The New York World says today that a movement has been started to place Alfred E. Smith in the United States Senate to keep him in the national political limelight for eventualities.

With this in view, says the newspaper, suggestions have been made to confidants of Mayor Walker that he appoint U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland chairman of the proposed city sanitation commission. Governor Roosevelt would then be called upon to appoint Smith to fill Copeland's unexpired term in the Senate.

The World says that Senator Copeland, who is now in Europe, is anxious to retain his Senate seat, but that strong pressure would be brought to bear upon him to undertake the city sanitation work as a public duty.

The chairman of the sanitation commission is stated to receive $10,000 a year. A Senator receives $10,000. Copeland is a former city health commissioner.

The bill for creation of a city sanitation commission has passed the Municipal Assembly and has been signed by Mayor Walker. It will be voted on at the next municipal election.

BOATS CRASH IN HARBOR HAZE; 250 IN PERIL

Ferry Brewster Hit by Bangor Liner Camden Off Rowe's Wharf

Fog along the New England coast today contributed to a collision between a liner and ferryboat in Boston harbor, disrupted shipping schedules and caused the [illegible] of two airplanes.

The [illegible] steamer Camden, [illegible] from Bangor with 200 passengers on board, crashed into the ferryboat Brewster, [illegible] ready to [illegible] steamer Rowe's wharf, [illegible] from the [illegible] harbor.

See Jewel Thief Clue in Westerly Arrest

The arrest by state police in Westerly, R. I., of a New Jersey man, who left several trays of white gold and platinum rings and brooches for surety, leads police of this city to believe they may be on the track of the thieves who have stolen valuables from wealthy North and South Shore summer residents this season, as well as the man who took $10,000 worth of jewelry from a salesman at the Parker House.

The trays left by Murray Penn of Ridgeway, N. J., arrested for reckless driving, are said to resemble those stolen from the hotel room of Richard A. Hunker, New York jewelry salesman. Westerly police have requested Boston police to check the jewelry they are holding. The gems are said to be worth $8000.

Penn was arraigned in Westerly and held in $500 bail for trial tomorrow morning. He had no money with him, he said, so he instead left his car and the trays of jewelry for surety.

Hunker's wares were stolen from his room at the Parker House while he was absent but a very short time. Two other cases of gems which were in the same bureau drawer as the stolen goods, were untouched.

Similar robberies have taken place in fashionable homes on the North Shore and Cape Cod within the last two months.

Searchers Fail to Find Lost Livermore Plane

Hopes for the safety of Harris Livermore, Boston banker, and his seven companions, missing in the wilds of the New Mexico-Arizona border since Tuesday, were revived today.

Despite reports that the giant airliner City of San Francisco had been found with the bodies of the eight occupants Zuni Indian runners sent out from Gallup, N. M., reported early today that they and found no trace of the missing monoplane.

The Transcontinental Air Transport liner was reported to have crashed 26 miles south of Gallup in the Black Rock valley when it was struck by a bolt of lightning. It was reported that the bodies of five passengers and three of the crew were found in the wreckage.

Airplanes, operating from both Gallup and Winslow, Ariz., also returned from the area without sighting any wreckage.

WRECK OF ANOTHER PLANE

Other advices from posses sent out to the district where the plane was reported as crashing also were without news of the plane's whereabouts.

At daybreak two hundred Indians were dispatched to search again for the wreckage.

While this search was under way the postmaster at Gallup denied that any of his carriers had reported sighting the wreck.

After an all night search a number of Indians from the reservation at Zuni, N. M., returned today with the report they could find no trace of an airplane reported wrecked near Zuni. C. H. Kelsey, manager of the Zuni Indian Training Co., said the Indians searched the territory in which the plane had been reported to have crashed and found no evidence of the wreckage.

The report had placed the plane

PETITION IS FOUND TO BE PROPERLY FRAMED

Attorney-General Overrules Objections Raised by the Prohibition Forces

Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner today approved the form of the initiative petition of the Constitutional Liberty League for repealing the state "Baby Volstead Act."

As the approved petition was handed to Mrs. Henry Preston White of Brookline, one of the original 10 signers, for filing with the Secretary of State, rumors of a big campaign fund and the securing of such nationally known figures as Billy Sunday were in circulation from the opposing camps.

WOMEN AT WORK

Mrs. White, who is organizing women's clubs all over the state in the interest of repeal, in co-operation with Mrs. Lothrop Ames, Mrs. George R. Fearing, and Mrs. Charles H. Babin, the latter a former Republican national committee woman from New York, said on filing the petition in the Secretary of State's office:

"There are thousands of women in this Commonwealth, ardent friends of temperance, who like myself believe prohibition has utterly failed to promote that virtue. I am convinced by experience that the Eighteenth Amendment was a mistake and should be repealed.

"I am equally convinced that repeal can and will come when the people of the states make it plain that they will no longer assist in its enforcement. I am glad of the opportunity, therefore, to file this initiative petition for the repeal of the so-called 'Baby Volstead Law.'"

WARNER'S VIEWS

Atty.-Gen. Warner, in a lengthy statement, pointed out that the constitution provides for the filing of such an initiative petition and he has no other recourse than to approve this one, since it is in proper form, is not the same as any measure submitted to the people within three years, and does not contain any subject excluded from the popular referendum.

He further explained that this petition is required to be submitted by the Secretary of State to the Legislature, and if the Legislature fails to enact it, it may be submitte dto the voters and if approved at the next state election (November, 1930), it shall become a law. The League, however, must file 20,000 names of certified voters from four counties before the first Wednesday in December of this year, and 50% more than if the Legislature refuses to accept it.

Mr. Warner says:

"It has been urged before me that I should not certify this initiative petition because such repeal would be unwise and would bring about great harm. Under the provisions of the Constitution I cannot conceivably have any power or authority to pass upon the wisdom or effect of a measure proposed by initiative petition. The people themselves or the Legislature, not I, have the right to determine these matters.

STORM HINDERS SEARCH OF NEW MEXICO WILDS

First Report of Finding Air Liner Wrecked and 8 Dead Is Denied

in a group of cedar hills 15 miles west of Zuni Pueblo.

Air searchers, diverted from more westerly points to that area which is 45 miles southwest of Gallup, were yet to be heard from, however.

This story, told to the reservation superintendent, and relayed to Albuquerque, was thought possibly to have concerned a plane piloted by Earl Gordon, with Lindsay Gillie of Los Angeles, president of the Angelus Aero Corporation, as passenger.

Gillis and Gordon left Albuquerque yesterday morning, failed to arrive in Los Angeles, and were not reported as having landed at any point en route.

23 PLANES IN SEARCH

Altogether 23 planes were engaged in the search for the transcontinental air liner today. While the air searchers were handicapped by bad weather, the hunters on land were confronted with washouts made bad ordinarily—all the aftermath of the storm in which the all-metal ship vanished.

Passengers aboard the missing craft were: William Beers, New York; Harris Livermore, Boston; M. M. Campbell, Cincinnati; A. B. McGaffey, Albuquerque, and Mrs. George Raymond, Glendale, Cal.

Pilot J. B. Stone, Assistant Pilot A. E. Dietel and Courier C. F. Canfield composed the crew.

Mrs. Raymond was the wife of George D. Raymond, a clerk in the T. A. T. offices at the Grand Central Air Terminal, Glendale, Cal. She had been visiting her father at Albuquerque, N. M.

McGaffey, 60 years old, was a wealth lumberman. He was on a pleasure trip to Los Angeles.

GOLF EDITOR ABOARD

Beers was editor of Golf Illustrated, and was flying to the national amateur tournament at Pebble Beach, Cal. He had been editor of the golf magazine for three years, and formerly was editor of the Fourth Estate, a newspaper trade journal.

Campbell was sales manager of the Richardson Paper Company at Cincinnati, and was en route here on business.

SEEN OVER FT. DEFIANCE

The last seen of the plane was when it passed low over Old Fort Defiance, N. M. at 11:40 Tuesday morning. So close to earth was the ship that it barely passed over a range of cliffs west of the little town.

It is believed by the hundreds of persons taking part in the search of the desert country that the same furious electrical storm which washed out miles of railway bridges in Arizona and whipped across the eastern part of New Mexico force the giant transport ship down.

When the tri-motored liner left Albuquerque it had more than sufficient fuel for the flight to Los Angeles, according to company officials.

U. S. STARTS INQUIRY

Capt. Walter F. Parkin, Department of Commerces Aeronautics Inspector however was prepared to leave Los Angeles for Winslow, Ariz., early to take charge of a federal inquiry into the affair.

Parkin was to leave on a Transcontinental Air Transport liner, schedules of the company having been resumed.

Officials of Transcontinental Air Transport in New York, after notifying last night the relatives of the passengers that they had a report the plane had been found and the passengers were dead, today notified the relatives that the report had not been verified, and there was a chance the plane reported referred to another missing plane rather than the T. A. T. ship. They told them the T. A. T. plane still was missing.

Railroad Agents Deny Wreck-Finding Report

Los Angeles, Sept. 5 (AP)—The chief dispatcher of the Santa Fe railroad told the Associated Press early today that he had just talked by telegraph with the Santa Fe agents at Peraea and Gallup, N. M., and that both denied having circulated a report that the T. A. T. liner City of San Francisco had been wrecked in the Black Rock country of New Mexico.

H. B. Beck, western traffic manager of Transcontinental Air Transport, informed of the agents' denials, the Associated Press that yesterday's report, upon which official statements had been issued, had been given out by the Santa Fe and received by the transport company as authenticated by the Santa Fe and Western Union.

Rhode Island schools for about 22 years.

When parents of the children heard of Mrs. Harris' discharge an indignation meeting was held at which a signed petition was drawn up and sent to Commissioner of Education Walter E. Ranger, informing him the children would not be sent to school until they were told why Mrs. Harris was not reappointed.

Two of the three members of the local school committee, on hearing of the move, interviewed several of the parents and warned them they were liable to fine if they persisted in keeping their children away from school.

WORKERS PLAN FOR STRIKE

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union will hold a mass meeting in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, tonight. David Dubinsky, New York union official, will address the local workers.

The purpose of this meeting, according to union leaders, is to appeal to the workers in the garment trades to organize so as to be ready for the general country-wide strike of their crafts in case the employing garment workers refuse to accede to the union's demands for a new and more progressive wage and working agreement when the present pact expires February 15 next.

Workers plan to join New York strikers and walk out, unless, as they contend, "a cleanout is made of sweatshops that have sprung up in the last two years since the communists succeeded in effecting their work of demoralization."

Burglar Bathes and Lunches in Home

Pawtucket, Sept. 5 — A burglar visited the home of Mary McElroy, 88 Brook street, one night while the family was out, took a bath, raided the ice box for luncheon and walked out the front door with $108 worth of jewlery. Entrance had been gained through a cellar window.

Three of the rails ripped through the car, tearing away one side of the man's head. Authorities said the man apparently had gone to sleep as the curve is not considered dangerous.

Briand's New League Plan Involves U.S.

treaty, Washington would accept the decision of the League Council as to which of two disputing nations was the aggressor and assist the League in enforcing peace.

Paul Hymans, Belgian foreign minister, had previously termed the League covenant as obsolete and suggested the Briand-Kellogg pact be substituted for it.

M. Briand said the league had waged a tremendous campaign against war and had been able to do so because it had prepared a propitious atmosphere.

He insisted that the pact signed in Paris last year was really framed from the ideals of the league.

War had been condemned as a crime, but it was now "essential not only to condemn war, but also to make war an impossibility," he said.

"What will happen if one or more of the nations violate the pact? How will the signatory nations prevent it?" he asked.

TOUCHES ON U. S. PACT

Referring to Premier MacDonald's remarks about Great Britain's naval conversations with the United States, Premier Briand recalled solemnly that the League covenant required the nations to reduce their armaments as a sacred obligation.

He had a firm hope that the Anglo-American naval conversations would succeed and that the disarmament commission of the League could convoke a conference.

There was, however, another kind of necessary disarmament, he warned, that of economic disarmament.

Returning to his cherished theme of the League of Nations, which furnished a kind of background for all his other remarks, M. Briand said he thought the world did not sufficiently realize that the League had not only prevented wars which threatened to break out, but had actually stopped conflicts which had already begun.

APPEAL TO WOMEN.

Raising both arms in a gesture of appeal, M. Briand cried:

"It is to the women of the world that I particularly address this appeal.

"See to it that you and your neighbors love the peoples of other lands as well as of their own. See to it that they are taught that war is impossible and that peace must reign forever."

"When that is achieved," he concluded with great emotion, "there will not be any need for the League covenant to mention reducing armaments."

Root's World Court Plan Wins Administration's O. K.

Washington, Sept. 5 (INS)—The plan conceived by Elihu Root for American adherence to the World Court received the administration's stamp of approval today.

Secretary of State Stimson announced it would be submitted to the Senate after the fifty-odd nations that are members of the court have approved it.

Root drafted the protocol to overcome the objection of other countries to a Senate reservation to prohibit the court from rendering an advisory opinion on a question in which the United States had or claimed an interest, without the consent of the United States.

It is not likely, however, there will be any Senate action for more than a year, due to the delays in having the plan approved by the fifty-odd other adherents to the court.

GIRL TRIES TO KILL MOTHER

Worcester, Sept. 5—Angered because she had received a whipping and had been sent to bed without supper, Doris Ganlin, 11, arose early today, obtained an axe in the cellar and then crept to the bedroom of her foster mother, Mrs. Sophie Oberg, 65, and attempted to slay her.

The alleged attack occurred at the Oberg home, Barrett ave., where for six years the Ganlin girl has lived as a State ward.

Policemen who were rushed to the house found the Ganlin girl sitting in the kitchen drinking a glass of milk. The axe was on the table.

Rushed to Worcester City Hospital Mrs. Oberg was found to be suffering from a possible fractured skull, deep cuts on the face, chest and back and from shock.

Under questioning, Doris is said to have told the police that she attacked Mrs. Oberg because of the alleged "cruelty" she had endured for several years while living with her foster parent.

Mrs. Oberg was unconscious when police found her in the house. She had apparently tried to flee from the assailant when felled by one of the blows.

In her story the girl told police that on two occasions this week she had been sent to bed without her supper and that she had been beaten almost daily for the past several weeks.

Mrs Seymour was born in Amherst. Although able to walk until a short time before her death, her hearing and sight had become impaired. In addition to her daughter, four sons survive.

LONG PRAISES AIR HEROISM

Chairman William P. Long of the park department today publicly commended Harold C. Crowley of the Colonial Air Transport Company for the heroism displayed in accident which occurred during the derby races last month at the East Boston Airport.

Chairman Long's letter said:

"I wish to extend to you my sincere appreciation of your wonderful assistance and to publicly commend you for the presence of mind you showed in grasping the difficult situation in which the wrecked plane with its three occupants crashed.

"The fact that you are an old service pilot and the skill you showed in flying to the scene of the accident and the landing of the plane in shallow water at no considerable risk to yourself should be highly commended, and I take this opportunity of doing so."

Death of a Third Child Reunites Divorced Parents in Waltham

After being divorced for nine years William H. Parry, 49, and Mrs. Ethel M. Dent Parry, 44, of Ash st., Waltham, are going to be remarried.

They were reunited through correspondence over the death of their third and last child who died a year ago. These letters relating to the death of the child, a girl of 22, resulted in personal meetings.

In a few days they will renew their marriage vows, application for a license having been filed today at Waltham city hall.

The Parrys were first married in New Foundland in 1903 and lived together six years. Then they separated. In the meantime three children had been born. All are now dead.

Mr. and Mrs. Parry met in New York after correspondence over the death of the last child. Mrs. Parry returned to the home of her parents in Waltham and her former husband followed her there from New York and renewed his courtship. He was accepted.

at both places, the fighting being severe while it lasted. The casualties among the British troops in these clashes is not known.

In the far-flung effort for a general "Holy War" Arabs throughout the Holy Land and the bordering states are being fanned into highly inflammatory propaganda to revolt and move against the government of Palestine.

Floods of this propaganda material are said to have emanated from Haifa, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Beirut and Aleppo. The cry is believed to have been instrumental in reviving the discontent reflected in today's rioting.

One of the proclamations in circulation among Arabs heralded a "fighters' holy war" and called upon all Arabs to help Arab insurgents in Palestine, whose condition was described in the blackest terms.

British troops guarding the frontiers have seized an automobile which attempted to cross Allenby bridge and then crept to the toolroom of her foster mother, Mrs. Sophie Oberg, 65, and attempted to slay her.

The alleged attack occurred at the Oberg home, Barrett ave., where for six years the Ganlin girl has lived as a State ward.

Policemen who were rushed to the house found the Ganlin girl sitting in the kitchen drinking a glass of milk. The axe was on the table.

Warburg Regrets "Error" That Led to Race War

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—Returning from Europe, where he participated in the formation of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, Felix M Warburg, philanthropist, expressed regret at the "incredible mistake" of permitting Zionist demonstrations near the western wall of the temple in Jerusalem during Arab disturbances.

Commenting on the disorders in Palestine, which were preceded by inflammatory speeches, Warburg said:

"It seems unbelievable that, during the absence of the high commissioner, chancellor and the major part of the staff and nearly all the executive of the Jewish Agency, the people in charge should have made the incredible mistake of permitting demonstrations near the western wall."

PILOTS' SKILL SAVES PLANES IN DENSE FOG

Army Flier Drops on Playground; Seaplane Lands Safely in Harbor

A thick fog, rolling in on the wake of a strong east wind, caused two airplanes to make forced landings near Boston. In both cases skillful piloting averted accidents. No one was injured.

Capt. I. F. Peak, army pilot, flying a government land plane to Boston from Langley Field, Va., with Lt. Frank Armstrong as his flight companion, was forced to land at the Stetson playground, So. Weymouth.

Although the landing gear was slightly damaged, Capt. Peak's work at the control stick enabled the craft to land without wrecking it, in a very small area. There being insufficient room for a takeoff the ship will be dismantled and will be hauled to Boston over the road.

Bringing his Boston-bound seaplane, carrying a co-pilot and five passengers down safely in Scituate harbor as a precautionary measure, Donald G. Van DerWater, Airvia Transportation Company pilot, avoided what might have resulted in a catastrophe to a less careful operator.

Van DerWater taxied the ship to Pemberton where he was met by a Coast Guard cutter from the Allerton Point station.

The five passengers were then transferred to a Gar-Wood speed boat of the Boston Airport Terminal Corporation and rushed to Boston in 23 minutes.

The list of passengers included: Mrs. Anne J Smith and her daughter, Miss Anne Smith, of New York; Miss Dorothy McKay of Cambridge, Walter Charak of 1 Park ave., New York and W. T. Berry of Virginia. The co-pilot, Clifford Kernochkea, stayed at Pemberton with the plane.

The 1000-mile air trip of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of organized baseball, from Boston to Louisville, Ky., where he will attend the final of the American Legion's Junior Baseball League competition was delayed by fog over the Airport.

Officials of the Colonial Air Transport, on whose wings the first stage of the trip is being staged, almost cancelled the take-off of the regular New York plane.

The pilot in his 60 h. p. boat, however, showed no concern, as he and some half dozen other passengers took their seats in the plane.

Woman, 103, to Make 6th Birthday Flight

Chicopee, Sept. 5 (AP)—"Grandma" Almatia Bennett, of Chicopee Falls, who will be 103 years old next Sunday and who took to aviation at the age of 95, is likely, from present indications, to signalize her birthday by taking her sixth flight, for today she received an invitation from officials of the Springfield Airport to do so.

On her 100th and 101st birthdays Old Orchard, Me. making the flight from near Boston. Her physician said today that it would be inadvisable for her to repeat such a flight with its attendant strain, but he saw no harm in a short flight, since "Grandma" is in excellent physical condition for her age, in spite of a set-back last June.

It was noted today that of the five pilots with whom she has flown, only one is now living.

MAYER SEES TALKIES AS MEDIUM TO INTERNATIONAL PEACE

MOVIE LEADER NOW GUEST OF HOOVER

Sound Films Will Teach Nations Each Other's Problems, He Thinks

By KENNETH CLARK

Washington, Sept. 5—American motion pictures will play a vital part in promoting harmony and mutual understanding among the nations of the earth.

This statement was made by Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture Corporation.

Mayer, who has been in Washington for several days, is to be a guest of President Hoover at the White House over the week-end. He had been invited to accompany the President to the Rapidan camp, but the trip was cancelled as the President wishes to remain in Washington to consult with Republican national committeeman who are to meet here Monday.

President Hoover has always shown a keen interest in the giant strides of the motion picture industry, and Mayer has frequently consulted with him on various phases of the industry.

Not only in the international field, but in the domestic, Mayer feels the motion picture will be of inestimable benefit to the people. He envisions a bright future for the sound pictures in the realm of education.

"The peoples of the earth are tired of wars and threats of wars," said Mayer. "They want peace, a chance to enjoy their lives fully and prosperously.

"Too often international discord among nations has been caused by a lack of appreciation of each other's problems, habits, hopes and ambitions. Not infrequently the misunderstandings have been due to unfamiliarity with each other's language.

"I think that the sound pictures in the future will cause English to be the universal language of the world—at least, that English will be taught and studied and understood generally by all peoples.

PROMOTES HARMONY

"This will remove a barrier to international harmony. When people talk the same language many of their ancient differences will disappear and good will and understanding will reign.

In this connection Mayer pointed out that already English is a compulsory study in the schools in Germany and Chile.

Through the talking picture Mayer is confident that American school children will have educational advantages never possessed by their parents.

"Think what it will mean when such studies as history and geography are taught through the sound pictures," he mused. "By visualizing the actual scene, by hearing and seeing the making of important historical events, the children will be able to learn and understand national and international problems quicker and better than heretofore.

"They also will be taught to think for themselves and thus the groundwork will be laid for their participation in national affairs in later years.

"Further, the sound pictures will give the people a more sympathetic and fulsome understanding of the problems of their government. When the government is brought closer to the people and the people closer to the government, that much quicker will there be a thorough appreciation of the events and issues that affect the lives of all of us."

To further this idea he declared the Hearst-Metrotone pictures plan to give the country frequent talks through the sound reels with prominent national figures.

"This will afford the people a clearer insight into the workings of the vast federal government," he explained.

Mayer, who was the honor guest at a dinner given Tuesday night by the Chilean ambassador, was a luncheon guest at the capital of Senator Capper of Kansas, Senators Shortridge of California, Allen of Kansas, Vandenberg of Michigan and Hastings of Delaware were also present. Later he had a conference with Vice-president Curtis.

Tonight Mayer will give a dinner at the Willard Hotel in honor of a number of senators and high government officials.

507 PET PEEVES REVEALED BY PSYCHOLOGY

Staatz Zeitung Says Without W. R. Hearst the Success Might Not Have Come

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 5 (AP)—A directory of life's principal annoyances, 507 pet peeves, was given to the ninth International Congress of Psychology, at Yale University, today by Prof. Hulsey Cason of the University of Rochester.

It may be used to minimize some of the day's discontent by learning when to be on guard against undue irritation. Virtually all the annoyances, said Professor Cason, "are learned," or acquired. A few, like the screech of a piece of chalk on a blackboard, are inherited, sure to grate on nerves the world over.

The average time of life to be most on guard against a state of irascibility is between the ages of 40 and 60. Susceptibility to annoyances is least from 10 to 25, rises a little from 25 to 40, is maximum from 40 to 60 and dwindling slightly from 60 to 90. Dr. Cason has not investigated beyond 90.

Women of all ages averaged uniformly more susceptibility to annoyances. There are exceptions. Men, for example, object nearly twice as much as women to dancing with a fat person. Men are distinctly more annoyed at seeing a person wearing mourning clothes or seeing an adult weep.

Among 21,000 instances of annoyances reported to Prof. Cason, those rating worst by the sufferers include:

To hear a mosquito near me when trying to go to sleep, to hear a woman swear, to see or hear a child harshly treated by an older person, a salesman trying to force me to buy, liquor smell on another's breath, and to see an intoxicated man or woman. Flies rate high, but mice not quite so bad.

To see a bald-headed man is found to be an occasional and slight annoyance, almost zero. Conversation about sin, dirt, germs and sex contains numerous sources of annoyances.

POPE RECEIVES FLAG CONTEST WINNERS

Young Americans Center of Attraction of Roman Diplomats and Society Leaders

By FLOYD E. WILLIAMSON

Rome, Sept. 5—For two days and two nights four young Americans have been the center of attraction of diplomats and society leaders in Rome. Only an audience with the Pope and visits to historic sites have interrupted the round of entertainment such as is seldom accorded visitors to Italy.

The flag champions knelt in reverence in the Vatican to receive the blessing of the Holy Father, and the ceremony was especially impressive when Pope Pius blessed two flags carried by Robert Sullivan, the boy champion from Syracuse. One of the flags was the Stars and Stripes, while the other was that of Cathedral high school, which the boy attends in his native city. Sullivan was presented with emblems which will forever be among his prized possessions.

The climax of the reception to the flag champions came at a brilliant dinner given by Mrs. Julia Wheelock, commander of the American Legion in Italy, whose work among Italian disabled veterans who fought for America, but who are now denied entry into the United States, has won for her the admiration and devotion of thousands of Italians.

Beautiful purses made by the disabled veterans were presented to the champions. A feature of the affair was the dramatic appearance of 10 of the Avanguardiste, an organization of young Fascists, who entered the dining hall carrying Italian and American flags and singing Giovinezza, their organization song. The four American guests stood at attention during this demonstration and responded with American songs.

At this dinner, the champions received their official welcome to Italy from Admiral Vannutelli of the Royal Italian Navy, who expressed the regrets of Premier Mussolini that he could not be present.

Other guests included Baron Sardi, Italian motion picture magnate; Major Collins, military attache of the American embassy; Leon Dominion, American consul; newspaper men and many prominent in the civic, social and business life of the city.

Keen interest is being shown by American and European diplomats in the plans of the United States Flag Association and the Hearst newspapers to send 60 boys and girls to Europe next year to humanly typify the American flag.

The flag champions, accompanied by their chaperon, Mrs. Edwin C. Gregory, left this morning for Florence, Italy.

M'DONALD SEES U. S. PACT NEAR

Geneva, Sept. 5 (AP)—The tremendous desire for peace shared by 95 per cent of all the peoples of the world will enable President Hoover and the British Prime Minister to solve the naval power problem, said Ramsay MacDonald today at a luncheon given the Council of the League of Nations by the International Association of Journalists.

The British Labor leader said: "This spirit of peace will support the hands of President Hoover and myself and enable us to settle the question as statesmen."

He added his conviction that no considerations of national interests would dominate them or cause them to risk failure.

"We have our difficulties, to be sure. There are things intricate in character to be settled, but the will of the people is more powerful than all else and in the end it must have the last word," said MacDonald.

FIGHT FOR CASH IN COURT

Brockton, Sept. 5—The ownership of $5700 in bills, some of it so old that the U. S. Treasury Department was called upon to replace it, will be contested in Plymouth County Superior Court by Mrs. Jenny Heacock of 108 Warren ave., this city, and Mrs. Flora Heach, of Warren ave., this city, mother and widow, respectively, of the late J. Edward Heacock, of whose estate the younger Mrs. Heacock is administratrix.

The money was found in a safety deposit vault at the Brockton Trust Co. Bank officials feel sure that some of the money had been in Heacock's possession for 50 years or more.

The younger Mrs. Heacock claims the money is a part of the estate and the older Mrs. Heacock says it is money that she gave her son, years ago, to keep in trust for her. She asks that her daughter-in-law be enjoined from using it is a part of the estate.

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—Police have been requested to help find a man who said he was C. A. Wagoner, bank president of Telluride, Col., who is charged with having fleeced the Harriman National Bank out of $75,000.

A week ago, according to Asst. Dist. Atty. Harold W. Hastings, the Harriman bank received a code telegram, supposedly from the American Exchange National Bank of Denver, asking for the transfer of $75,000 from the Harriman bank to the credit of the Telluride bank of Colorado in the Wall Street branch of the Chase National bank.

The money was placed on deposit there and subsequently a man who said he was C. A. Wagoner, president of the Telluride bank, appeared with a cashier's check and drew the money out.

Then the Harriman bank learned that the telegram was not sent by the Denver bank.

Damages of $1,000,000 and $750,000, respectively, are sought.

The claims arise out of the famous "tube clause" of the Radio Corporation of America license agreements under which it was alleged the corporation attempted to monopolize the vacuum tube business.

AL JOLSON IS LOOKING FOR A LEADING LADY

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 5—Al Jolson says W. A. Brady may be right in his statement that all the actors and actresses are in Hollywood, but he hasn't been able to find a leading lady for "Mammy."

Louella O. Parsons

"I will take who ever they want at Warners," said Al, mournfully, "but they cannot even suggest a girl. Aren't there any more juveniles in Hollywood?"

"I couldn't smile at all," Al said, "if it weren't for the fact that Louise Dresser had already agreed to play "Mammy," said Al, "and that mammy stuff is probably out since the location of the picture is in Arizona. But, anyway, Miss Dresser is to be my mother in my next picture.

"I wired Lowell Sherman to play a part, and he said, 'Send on the script and I'll see,' said Al. "I thought it was easy to get a cast together, now that Equity had settled its trouble, but it's just as tough to get the people you want as it was a month ago.

"How about Mrs. Jolson for the part?" I asked.

"Ruby isn't well enough," said her husband, "and besides, I like her too much to have any possible disagreements about movies after we get home at night."

ROD LA ROCQUE and Vilma Banky spent a few days' vacation this last week at the lodge at Lake Arrowhead, Rod to get in readiness to play the part of the Prince in "The Swan," and Vilma to help Rod fish and rest.

Let's hope that United Artists does not try to change Molnar's play, "The Swan." Its sparkling lines and splendid comedy and excellent possibilities for characterization are all too good to have the Princess marry the tutor or some such thing.

Lillian Gish will have an excellent cast in her first talkie. Conrad Nagel plays the part of the tutor and, as I said before, efforts will be made to get Marie Dressler for the part of the Queen. Basil Rathbone was first reported as United Artists' choice for the Prince, but this was apparently founded on rumor, for Rod told me himself that he has signed the contract, and he ought to know.

FRANKLIN PANGBORN has associated himself so entirely with the legitimate stage the last six months, it is pleasant news to hear he has returned to the movies. A good role in "Dulcy," Marion Davies' picture, gave him the idea. Although he will spend most of his time at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios the next few weeks, he will also operate the Vine at theater, but he will not appear in the new play, "The Youngest." Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has already been engaged for the leading role, and this gives Mr Pangborn a chance to play in Marion's picture.

IT has taken the film colony all week to settle down to normalcy after Labor Day. That's what a holiday does to most of us. Dolores Del Rio started the week in style by flying to New York via the Transcontinental Air Transport route. Her maid did her best to persuade Miss Del Rio that it was a mistake, but Dolores had made up her mind.

Patsy Ruth Miller, approaching marriage notwithstanding, started work this week on "Wild Open," opposite Edward Everett Horton. Edna Murphy is also in the cast. Pat certainly hasn't had any time to waste, what with her marriage to Tay Garnett set a whole week ahead.

The Curious Quizzer

Persons on Tremont St. Answer His Question and Pose for Pictures

THE QUESTION

Should juries in criminal trials be replaced by a board of psychologists, as recommended by Prof. Barnes of Smith College?

MISS ESTHER PRUE, Tremont st., South End—Jury trial as a rule meets with favor by our citizens. To change the policy which has been satisfactory for so many years in the disposition of criminal cases would be a mistake. With the jury system a man who is my peers, representative citizens to hear his case and I believe that method of determining whether a person on trial is guilty or innocent should be continued in preference to the method suggested by the college professor.

HERBERT H. WYNN Tremont st., South End—The truth of the saying that a good big man is better than a good little man when two men of unequal weight meet in the ring applies similarly to abolishing 12 men on the jury and replacing them by three psychologists to try criminal cases. I positively would prefer to have my case heard by 12 men if I were in court for trial on a criminal charge than by two or three brain specialists. Year after year our juries have performed their duties faithfully; in most cases, and I can see no good reason why the jury system should be dropped as recommended by Professor Barnes.

MRS. RITA JOHNSON, Cross st., Somerville—Let college professors give their opinions on astronomy, anatomy, subjects they understand better than they do the subject of criminology. Let them continue their studies in psychology and in science. The laws governing our court trials should be continued as they were made by brainy students of legal affairs who presented the people the best means for ministering justice between litigants in the criminal courts. Twelve persons on a jury, who are compelled by law to agree as one man in disposing of criminal cases is about as good a method for fairness as any I know.

GEORGE C. HAMILTON, Oliver st., Malden—Juries at times were said to have accepted money if they voted to acquit persons charged with criminal offenses in the superior courts. But I believe that is seldom, if ever, true. Outside of cases providing for capital punishment, in which 12 jurors should sit, I believe that a board of psychologists, such as that recommended by the Smith College professor, would be an improvement over the present jury system. The new method would save time in disposing of criminal cases, which at present appear to be crowding the courts. In ordinary criminal cases I agree that a body of psychologists who were appointed by a non-political organization, composed of members of the State Supreme Court, would better the present jury system.

400 PICKED TO SURVEY ROUTE FOR CANAL

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP)—A picked engineering battalion, numbering 400 officers and men, today was ordered by Secretary Good to duty in the Central American jungle to survey the route of the proposed $1,000,000,000 Nicaraguan canal.

Largely on the report of these engineers will depend the decision of the American government as to whether it shall undertake the stupendous task of constructing a canal stretching 183 miles through tropical mountains and forests from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans.

Government engineers estimate it would require ten years to complete the project, which would give the United States, with the Panama Canal, two of the most important waterways in the world.

TWO-YEARS' JOB

The battalion is being outfitted to remain in the jungle region for two years.

The survey was approved by Congress last spring, when it was brought to its attention that the Panama Canal with its present facilities probably would be overburdened soon if he annual tonnage continued to increase.

Thework will be supervised by the interocean canal board, consisting of five military and civilian engineers appointed by President Hoover. The board members are Lieut.-Gen. Edgar Jadwin, retired, former chief of army engineers; Sidney B. Williamson of New York; Dr. Anson Marston of Ames, Ia.; Frank M. Williams of Albany, N. Y., and Maj. Ernest Graves, retired.

MUST CROSS MOUNTAIN.

Maj. Dan I. Sultan of the office of the chief engineers, has been placed in direct charge of the work by President Hoover.

The engineers will be compelled to combat for 43 miles the waters of the San Juan river from Greytown on the Atlantic to Lake Nicaragua. The route then will take them 70 miles across Lake Nicaragua to the Cordillera Mountain Range that forms the divide of the eastern and western slopes. Through this mountain range for 70 miles they must carry transit, rod and chain.

NEW MISHAP TO ITALIAN RACER

Calshot, Eng., Sept. 5 (AP)—Bad luck continued today to dog the paths of the Italian airmen who are here in an attempt to win the Schneider speed cup races Saturday.

Their Macchi 52 seaplane, in which Maj. Bernardi set his world speed record, was damaged after a flight by Warrant Officer Tomaso Del Moltin. The pilot flew 10 minutes successfully and made a good landing, but while stopping the machine developed a list to starboard, its float having been punctured.

The pilot climbed out and tried to get the machine upright, but only the timely arrival of speed boats, one of which got its nose under the starboard wing, prevented the seaplane from sinking.

GANGMEN SLAY 2 IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Sept. 5 (AP)—A double murder, fifth outbreak of gang guns in Chicago within a week, was committed early today in the peaceful shadows of Jacob Riis park, Fullerton and Narragansett aves.

One of the victims was Cy Crowley, a well known West Side hoodlum, bomber, terrorist and "muscle man." The other, unknown to police, was identified as Eddie Westcott.

Last Week James Bowman's body was delivered at a hospital by a man who fled before police arrived, and William Connors was shot down in a gangster's battle in a North Clark st. cabaret. Two days ago Cy Tearney, manager of the Garden of Allah roadhouse, was seriously wounded by gunmen.

SKYWAYS SELLS TWO POWERFUL STEARMANS

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

There have been airplanes sold in this town, plenty of them, but it is an unusual event when a couple of ten thousand dollar ships have been sold in one day. Such a thing happened down on Cape Cod this past week-end.

Two Stearman Whirlwind-motored biplanes were sold by Skyways, Inc., to Lieut. C. S. "Dutch" Shankie, U. S. Army Air Corps, and Olcott B. Payson, sportsman pilot, of Portland and Boston.

Jack Langley and Crocker Snow, both of Skyways, put on a show at the Skyways' summer flying school field at Marston's Mills and Falmouth Airport. It proved a happy moment for "Dutch" Shankie, who purchased without hesitation.

Now Skyways is minus a plane and must get some more Stearmans.

Lieut. Shankie formerly owned a Moth, and his wife, the former Joan Fay, of Boston, has piled up her 55 solo hours in the ship. Mrs. Shankie decided that she had had enough of the light airplanes, and wanted to get into the high power class. Hence the 225-horsepower motored Stearman.

Now we will have our first Massachusetts woman pilot holding both state and federal private licenses.

The old saying, however true it is, that when something happens, the police are late getting there, is evidently untrue. In the recent crack-up at the Hub airport, in which three people were killed, the first persons to arrive at the end of the runway were Capt. Campbell, of Station 7, East Boston, and three of his officers. The work they did in keeping order during the hectic hour following the crash is worthy of mention.

Albert "Eddie" Edson, superintendent of the airport, commented on the work of the capable Capt. Campbell, and wrote to Commissioner Long.

Hazley R. Bazeley, who is now manager for the Curtiss Flying Service in Pittsburgh, came up to Boston with two passengers. The primary reason for his trip was to attend the funeral of his father in Everett. Several ships from the local Curtiss company will fly over the cemetery during the services today.

One of the country's best little pilots, Richard W. "Dick" Mackie, superintendent of this division for Colonial Air Transport, returned from the wars at the National Air Races at Cleveland, with a severe head cold, and the satisfaction that his making eight outside loops with a tapered wing Waco, was sufficient to make Dreddie Lund, chief test pilot of the Advance Aircraft Corporation, builders of the snappy Waco airplanes, bounce him off his stunt team. Lund, with Mackie and a chap named White, had captured the attention of the thousands of people who attended the air races, but had not made first base with the newspaper syndicates because of the superabundance of military and naval fliers, who were cavorting around the skies in Curtiss Hawks.

Mackie said he never had more fun in his life than he did with the Waco, and the eight outside loops were just part of the fun that went with attending the great aircraft show.

A trip to Boothbay Harbor, Me., took Harold Greenleaf "Waco" Crowley in his 300 horsepower Whirlwind motored Ireland seaplane, away for the afternoon. The three passengers have flown various places before, and when Curtiss told them that they could go up in a seaplane, and land right in the harbor at Boothbay, they fell for the idea. "Ken" Kendall, Hazen Bean and Mason Sears, the latter operations manager of the Boston station of Curtiss, better get hot and keep this boy Crowley flying up and down the coast. There are plenty of places one can go in a seaplane on this stern and rockbound coast that never will be reached by land-plane," said Crowley. "The sooner the flying public of Boston realises this, the sooner the seaplane will come into its own."

There's a big secret around the airport. Down on the southwest corner of the airport, behind the circle; are five masts being erected. The masts are guyed by wires, and the first have insulators. It does not take a detective to analyse this as meaning that they are for a radio beacon, but it does take a Sherlock Holmes to discover if the radio outfit is to be mutually owned or not.

Let's turn on the BEACON LIGHT

. . . and ask (and answer) a few questions that concern gasolines and so-called premium fuels

"The Colonial soldier is your protection"

Almost everyday a new gasoline—or a new variation of an old gasoline—is offered to the motoring public. Claims and counter-claims are frequently and rashly indulged in. Little or no attempt is made to tell the "whys and wherefores" of alleged excellence. Proofs of actual performance—laboratory tests and road tests alike—are conspicuously absent.

In view of the confusion which must exist in the minds of thousands of motorists, the Beacon Oil Company conceives it as a duty—and a service—to clarify the minds, not only of its thousands of loyal customers but of the entire motoring public as well and to set forth the real truth about the entire motor fuel situation.

1—Basically what is a good gasoline? A good gasoline—in non-technical terms—is one which fires instantly, regardless of weather; which accelerates swiftly—no lagging, no drag-drag on the pick-up; which gives a maximum of mileage regardless of weather or road; which consumes cleanly down to the very last drop—leaving a minimum of loose seepage ends to dilute the oil in the crankcase—to form carbon on the cylinder walls. Colonial Gasoline has all these qualities—and is constantly being improved. It is always "a new gasoline." It is an extra-refined gasoline at no extra price, made from specially-selected crudes with no taint or admixture of (borderland) elements or kerosene characteristics found so frequently in ordinary and inferior gasolines.

2—Does it cost more to produce a gasoline like Colonial? Yes, it does. The extra quality of Colonial Gasoline has been secured at an extra refining cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars. But the increased sales, due to the improved quality of Colonial, offset the additional cost and the Beacon Oil Company is able, therefore, to offer motorists a really superior gasoline at the same price paid for ordinary or inferior products.

3—Are any of the so-called non-premium gasolines equal in quality and performance to so-called premium gasolines? Colonial is the exception. For at least 80% of the cars in use today, Colonial Gasoline will produce a performance record which cannot be surpassed by any other gasoline on the market, including those which are sold at a premium. For about 20% of cars Colonial Ethyl is imperatively needed and will give 100% satisfaction.

4—Why is Colonial Ethyl peculiarly adapted to at least 20% of cars in use today and why is it superior to other so-called premium gasolines? Colonial Ethyl has as its base Colonial Gasoline with all its virtues as described above. In addition, it contains tetra-ethyl lead which has the peculiar virtue of eliminating knocks and delivering therefore a continuous maximum flow of smooth and irresistible power. Colonial Ethyl is compounded especially for those cars whose compression ratios are higher than those of a few years ago and also for those cars badly carbon-caked. Cars of these two classes constitute about 20% of the total car registration. Colonial Ethyl is built-to-order for them.

5—Is Colonial Ethyl ever justified in cars other than those described above? Yes, where a really deluxe fuel is desired—with certain extra refinements "custom built"—one buys Colonial Ethyl.

6—What is the guarantee to the motorists of Colonial quality, whether found in Colonial, Colonial Ethyl or the various brands of Beacon Oils? The answer is simple and irrefutable. The Beacon Oil Company is a New England company, the only one which exclusively refines and manufactures within the borders of New England. Its undeviating policy for years has been to make super-quality products. It employs the finest selected crudes in the world and refines with that traditional Yankee regard for honest craftsmanship and in-built, up-standing quality. "Drop for drop, dollar for dollar, the finest petroleum products offered to New England and New York State motorists."

Increasing sales of Colonial and Colonial Ethyl Gasoline are the surest testimony that the faith of thousands of satisfied motorists has not been misplaced—nor will it be.

Beacon Oil Co., Inc., Refinery and Offices, Boston, Massachusetts, New York City offices, Graybar Building.

"Make any test you want, Colonial quality will stand the light"

Colonial Gas

The same integrity that characterizes Colonial fuels also characterizes Colonial service everywhere. Courtesy is more than a name and every customer is treated on the basis of being a friend and a constant friend, deserving the best. We are continually seeking to improve the features and general high level of our service. We gladly welcome from anyone comments or criticisms designed to make for even better service at Colonial stations.

ZEPP IS COMING TO U. S. AGAIN IN OCTOBER

Friedrichshafen, Sept. 5 (INS)—The Graf Zeppelin is being groomed for two more flights before it is hangared for the winter.

Within three weeks, after complete repairs are effected, the world-conquering dirigible will swing out on a long flight touching almost every corner in Germany, and will then start again for New York on its third commercial venture across the Atlantic.

Although the world flight ended officially in Lakehurst and the Graf's latest crossing of the Atlantic was merely the return trip of the Graf's early August crossing to Lakehurst, all Germany turned out to welcome Capt. Ernest A. Lehmann and the crew that manned the Zepelin around the world.

Great regret was expressed that Dr. Hugo Eckener, world-famed master of the leviathan of the air, was not present to receive the plaudits of his countrymen.

The Graf's outer skin will be tightened and the motors and "insides" of the craft thoroughly overhauled by Sept. 25, according to Capt. Lehmann. Then, he said, the Zeppelin will be taken across the Atlantic to Lakehurst in October, anniversary month of her first flight to America. He declined to state whether Dr. Eckener or he would command.

PLAN NEW AIR RAIL LINE TO MEXICO

Kansas City, Sept. 5 (AP)—A new international air-rail combination, bringing New York and Mexico City within two business days of each other, was announced today by the universal Aviation Corporation. The service will be inaugurated Sunday.

The schedule of the new system calls for a flying time of 27 hours and 15 minutes on the westward trip, with an overnight stop at Brownsville, Tex. The return trip would be made in 49 hours and 5 minutes, with no overnight stops.

The service, the announcement said, calls for departure from New York on the New York Central lines to Cleveland, the Universal Air Line from Cleveland to Tulsa, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas from Tulsa to Dallas, the Southern Air Transport from Dallas to Brownsville and the Mexican Aviation Corporation from Brownsville to the City of Mexico.

Stimson Gets His Goat in Washington

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP)—William Hamilton Bones, pet goat in which Secretary Stimson and his military aids while he was Governor of the Philippines, Capt. Eugene A. Regnier, share an interest, has arrived in Washington although last reports had him deported from San Francisco.

Billy arrived here by freight in company with two of Regnier's horses sent from the Philippines.

Scores Asleep in Hotel During Fire

While several score guests slept undisturbed, Boston Protective Company No. 3 extinguished a small fire in the basement of Hotel Arlington, South End, early today. The firemen, summoned on a still alarm, reported the blaze to have been caused by careless disposal of a cigarette. Damage was about $70.

Poincare Gains in Plan for Operation

Paris, Sept. 5 (AP)—It was said today at the home of Raymond Poincare, former premier, that if he gained strength as he has for the past fortnight, the operation for prostatitis could be performed at the last of the month. He eats and sleeps well, but his doctors want him to get the greatest possible amount of repose.

GERMAN PAPER LAUDS AID GIVEN ZEPP

Seattle, Sept. 5—The Washington Staats Zeitung, German newspaper published in Seattle, in an editorial pays high tribute to William Randolph Hearst for his support of the historic Graf Zeppelin flight and praises his newspapers for giving the world the best accounts of the tour. The editorial follows:

"The world flight of that wonderful German air vehicle, the Graf Zeppelin; the undaunted Dr. Hugo Von Eckener and his crew, and last, but not least, the enterprise and confidence of William Randolph Hearst in active support and foresight, with a well-ordered news service at his command, are things that will go into the annals of human achievement among all people of the earth.

"We have had occasion to credit Teutonic accomplishments in every sphere, but it is especially pleasing to note that an American partook in promotion and assistance of the Zeppelin tour.

"Therefore, we wholeheartedly congratulate Mr. Hearst for his spirit in this event and extend it to the organization that gave the world the best accounts, step by step.

"Truly international, cosmopolitan if you please, was this effort of journalism, supported by means that were liberally spent, which has given us a new hope for the better alignment of the nations. Money alone could not have done it, without a willingness to sustain the task by active participation.

"The Washington Staats Zeitung has enjoyed closely watching the progress of the circumnavigation of the globe and what it may and must, mean to better concord.

"We have praise to utter for the Hearst liberality, to which we have been indebted for their cooperation with the Staats Zeitung, that enabled us to give our readers many interesting features and we trust the relation may further enable us to give the public ground for understanding and appreciation of what this Hearst undertaking has so well advanced."

Five pictures of Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old school girl, who charges Alexander Pantages, millionaire film magnate, with attacking her. Pantages' wife, Mrs. Lois Pantages, is now on trial at Los Angeles charged with having caused the death of Joe Rokomoto, when the auto which she was driving was in collision with Rokomoto's car. The crash occurred June 16, Rokomoto dying a few days later. (International Newsreel photos.)

MRS. PANTAGES UNDER EYES OF ALIENISTS

Los Angeles, Sept. 5 (INS)—As the work of selecting a jury for the murder trial of Mrs. Alexander Pantages went ahead today it was learned that the defendant is being closely watched by alienists for the prosecution.

At the instruction of District Attorney Fitts, Mrs. Pantages has been watched by three famous alienists who have had her under observation since the fatal automobile crash in which Joe Rokumoto, a Japanese, was killed.

The district attorney's office ordered the secret observation so the State may be prepared to thwart a "last resort" defense of the Pantages lawyer.

A possible defense, the state fears, might be that Mrs. Pantages, wife of the millionaire theater man, who himself faces trial on the charges of Eunice Pringle, 17, is in such mental condition that she is not responsible for her actions—at least at times of excitement.

Kiddies are fascinated with the way Rice Krispies crackle when you pour on milk or cream.

And what a flavor treat! Toasted rice bubbles. Wonderful for breakfast, lunch and supper. Fine to use in candies, macaroons. In soups. Order from your grocer. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. It's new!

City Fights Ford Over Lincoln Courthouse

Lincoln, Ill., Sept. 5 (INS)—This city, proud to have been named for Abraham Lincoln before he became a world figure, is up in arms today at the proposal of Henry Ford, Detroit motor magnate, to move to Dearborn, Mich., the old Pottsville Courthouse, now a subject of nationwide controversy. In this structure Abraham Lincoln practiced law back in the 40s.

For years the city somnolently saw the structure house a family of colored folk, all of whom were employed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Beach. Mrs. Beach offered the building to the county if the county would pay for its upkeep. The offer was spurned. The State refused a similar offer.

So the building, painted a brilliant yellow, stood on the outskirts of the city, attracting little attention.

Then suddenly came the announcement that Mrs. Beach had sold the building to Ford. Following that announcement came the rumor that Ford intended to remove the edifice to Dearborn, Mich., where it would be one of numerous historical structures to be gathered there by the Detroit manufacturer as a national shrine.

Immediately a great furore arose. Various persons wrote and wired Ford protesting the proposed action. Finally Ford came here to inspect the property. Belief after his visit was that he still plans to move the structure as rumored.

Maine Chief Justice Named for Oil Suits

Scott Wilson, chief justice of the Maine Supreme Court, was appointed by Judge James M. Morton, Jr., in the federal court here, auditor and master to hear evidence in the Sherman act suits brought by the Ballard Oil Burning Equipment Co. and the Ballard Fuel Oil Terminal Corp., against the Mexican Petroleum Corp., and others.

Damages totaling $30,000,000 were sought in the two actions in the original declarations.

SOS for Cash Leads to Death Rumor

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 5 (AP)—Ed Farrell wired dad from Clarksdale, Ark., for money to get home. His five-year-old sister, Rose, knew of only one reason for telegrams, so she told the neighbor Ed was dead. There followed telephone calls to the house and Mrs. Farrell fainted.

Marshall Grows Worse

Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 5 (AP)—The condition of Louis Marshall, prominent New York lawyer, who has been ill here, took a sudden turn for the worse today and his condition is considered grave. He has grown weaker.

Sights in Radio Factory Startle Woman Visitor

What makes the biggest impression on woman visitors at a modern radio factory—the thirty-two acre plant which Atwater Kent has built as a [illegible] of his faith in the present and future of radio? Here's one woman's answer—written by the wife of a famous announcer, who spent a few hours watching Atwater Kent Radio in the making:

"The buildings are modern to the last degree...floods with sunlight and so clean. Even in the [illegible] partments [illegible] witness here [illegible] by machine work [illegible] during the [illegible] There [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] cotton [illegible] waste on the floors. Such neatness! It [illegible] only improves the appearance of the work rooms, but makes work easier and pleasanter. Any woman knows how a messy kitchen can upset her morale and slow down her work.

"To a woman, of course, the most interesting thing was the number of women employed, and the importance of their work. You expect to see women assembling small parts of a radio set, but I saw them actually winding coils (and so deftly, too), preparing transformers, working on radio speakers, burning insulation from wires, matching various parts as in [illegible] for boards, and so on.

Some of the copper wire used in Atwater Kent receiving sets is finer [illegible] than a human hair. More than 4,000,000 [illegible] of wire will be [illegible] this year. In a single line, it would go [illegible] more than eighty times around the [illegible]

ATWATER KENT RADIO

In your home—where a radio must prove itself—this Screen-Grid Set is supreme!

DOES all the hullabaloo of claims confuse you? Don't let it! Why, Atwater Kent could fill a page with great big words describing the technical ways in which the Atwater Kent Screen-Grid Set is better. But only a radio engineer would understand them.

No. Atwater Kent has always believed in talking about radio in a plain, everyday manner, so that every purchaser could know just what he was getting, and what it would do under his own roof.

When we say that here is a radio made infinitely better by Atwater Kent's method of using the new Screen-Grid tubes and other proved improvements—that it gives you all the light and shadow of music, with every note natural as life, all the way up and down the scale, at any volume, without exaggeration; —with needle-point selectivity to pick the station you want as a telescope picks out a single star;

—with power to get far-off stations when you want them—more power than you're likely to need;

—with operation as fast as you can move your fingers;

—with no hum, no power noises—

we're merely saying that here's next year's radio, made with the famous Atwater Kent precision—dwarfing all ordinary radio with the magnificence of its performance—as good in your home as it is in the advertisements—your choice of exquisite cabinets or table models—and ready for you NOW.

SCREEN-GRID RADIO

How Much Do You Hear When You Listen?

It's a curious fact that many radio listeners are not hearing music as it really is.

They are putting up with reception that was good in the early days of radio but is a pale imitation compared with the living reality as brought to owners of the Atwater Kent Screen-Grid set.

How well do you hear the broadcast concerts? Does every part of an orchestra blend into a well-balanced unity?

Do you hear the [illegible] as a [illegible] as [illegible] the [illegible] and does the tone [illegible] quality of [illegible] instrument come through without distortion? An orchestra portray every mode of emotion and picture every kind of [illegible] by using instruments of the symphonies [illegible] qualities. Every instrument has its own personality, [illegible] the accuracy with which [illegible] of these personalities is reproduced depends the complete enjoyment of radio programs.

Hearing music over your radio should be equivalent to seeing the orchestra, as well as hearing it. When you hear music over an Atwater Kent Screen-Grid, you hear all of the sound reproduced so truly that you can construct [illegible]

CASH IN BUCKS IN ALL SORTS OF WEATHER

By WON LUCKY BILL

The hot spell failed to affect the keen interest of thousands of Boston Evening American readers in my game of finding lucky bucks.

In fact, the mercury around the 100 mark just seemed to spur them on in their hunt, and the result is that today I was taken across the board for the sum of $60. This was distributed to six holders of old $1 bills listed in the Boston Evening American yesterday.

There were two $20 winners in the crowd. William Dooley, 7 Gertrose st., Roxbury, turned in lucky buck X56757793D for $20, and Mrs S. Richardson, 9 Danforth st., Fall River, turned in lucky buck X86851543D for another $20.

Two lucky bucks arrived home from New Hampshire; D. A. M Sweeney, 156 Bridge st., Manchester, sent A38715036E, a winner for $5, and Mrs. Mollie Freeman, 54 Cabot st., Portsmouth, sent in A80426459E, another winner for $5

Mrs. Catherine Currier, 55 Howe st., Methuen, sent in lucky buck M30611153D, good for $5.

Miss Margaret Anderson, 27 St. Botolph st., brought in B56278168E, a winner for $5.

Another set of 16 winners, worth a total of $150, went on the list today. These bills were spent over the Labor Day holiday, and I scattered them far and wide in New England. Don't take any chances, possibly you have one of them right now in your pocketbook that is worth $20. Check up. Don't let this "easy" money slip through your purse strings without making an effort to get some of it.

I pay on all lucky bucks only within one week from the date of the first publication of the serial number in the Boston Evening American. So watch your old greenbacks carefully. They are getting scarcer and scarcer every day. If you don't believe me ask your banker.

Now It's $905 in B. R. for Old Dollar Bills

Georges Clemenceau, wartime Premier of France, ill at his country home, was declared improved today.

CLEMENCEAU IS IMPROVED

Sables D'Olonne, France, Sept. 5 (AP)—The condition of Georges Clemenceau, wartime premier, was described as better today, following three or four days when he has not been so well.

Nevertheless servants at his place near here at St. Vincent Surjard have strict orders not to permit anyone except his doctors to enter the house.

A heavy fog and cold wind today made conditions disagreeable for the patient.

NEW OFFERINGS FEATURE HUB MARKET

Several delicious new offerings are in the market this week to welcome returning vacationists wishing to replenish the larder.

Cape Cod cranberries, at 25 cents a quart, arrived in the market this week. While the cranberry crop is not as good as in past years, marketmen said, it was expected that the supply would be adequate at reasonably firm prices.

Delaware and Niagara grapes, each priced at 35 cents a basket, are two more new offerings which are bound to be popular. Native Concord grapes at $1.50 to $1.75 a box, wild grapes at $2.50 to $3.50, and fancy grapes at $3.50, also are among the new offerings.

The feature of the sea-food markets this week is the arrival of Long Island fresh scallops at $1.50 a quart. Other fish prices, which are practically the same as last week, are lobsters, 55 to 85 cents; sword fish, 30 cents; haddock and cod, 12 cents; mackerel, 15 to 25 cents each. Blue fish at 30-cents is still plentiful and remains one of the best buys in the market.

Native produce appears steady in price with good quality offerings in abundance. Yellow tomatoes at 10-cents a pound, celery at 30-cents a bunch and apples at $1.25 a peck over-ruled.

TRIAL OF FOUHY IS HELD UP AGAIN

After two nol-prosses had been entered by the prosecution in an unusual tangle of technalities, the court martial of Capt. Leo A. Fouhy, wagon company, 26th division, on charges that he falsified the drill attendance record of his company, was again halted temporarily at least, by Col. Frank Gibbs, president of the court.

The nol-prosses were entered, it was stated, in order that the judge advocate might make sure that the case against the accused officer was in proper form in every respect. At the same time, a letter was read into the record from Senator John P. Buckley of Charlestown, who had been entered as an associate counsel for the accused in which the Senator said he will introduce a legislative order for an investigation into the inspector-general's department.

The first nol-pros, it developed, had been entered before the convening of the court in the State House, and as soon as the proceedings started Major Frederick L. Breen, counsel for Capt. Fouhy, protested that the nol-pros should have been entered in the presence of the accused. The protest was over-ruled.

Seeks Arrest of Man After Winning on Tip

Chicago, Sept. 5 (AP)—Mr. E. N. Byrne, a mining engineer from Lexington, Ky., won a nice piece of change on a horse that ran next to last in the third race at Lincoln Fields. Then he went to the police station to have the man who gave him the tip arrested.

A while ago Byrne met a man who said he was Lee Lester and owned a string of horses, but they could not run at Lincoln Fields unless Mr. Byrne could lend Lester $405, railroad fare for the nags.

So Mr. Byrne did so. Yesterday Lester left. Byrne a steed yclept Brockway was sure thing to finish second in the third race, so Byrne gave Lester $200 to bet on the horse.

Byrne later at the track put $300 on Brockway to finish second. Brockway straggled in, next to last. Byrne learned that Lester had no string of horses.

But Brockway was a "field" horse; and another field horse, Royal Omar, finished second, and the pay-off was $18.46 on a $2 ticket. Byrne collected $2769. Then he hustled to police headquarters and demanded the arrest of Lee Lester as a swindler, who had $600 of his money.

Brockton, Sept. 5—District Attorney Winfield M. Wilbar today ordered Deputy Sheriff M. H. Coulter to investigate the death of William S. Wood of Pratt st., Avon, who died of burns in Brockton hospital. Wood was found by firemen in the Plymouth st. (Holbrook) woods, while they were fighting a forest fire.

It was at first believed the fire was caused by Wood's smoking, but the district attorney has been informed he did not smoke. A man with whom Wood is believed to have been riding in an automobile is being sought.

Praises Temperance Plan of Belgium

Editor Boston American:

Having been in Belgium all summer, I saw much on prohibition that held my interest. They have semi-prohibition over there. It is the land of light wines and beers.

With this semi-prohibition they have fewer accidents, working men drink less and stay at home more. I wish that those who object to a modification of the Volstead Act would just live a few weeks in Belgium to see that country's plan in operation.

Answers Query on Federal Check Law

Editor Boston American:

It is not a crime against the federal law to issue a check for less than one dollar. It is not an offense under the law of July 17, 1862, unless there is an element of intent to circulate the check as money. This in answer to to T. Y. F., in your column.

More Statuary In Churches Favored

Editor Boston American:

There is one practice very noticeable in and around churches in Quebec, where I have been for nearly a month. It is the use of statuary.

This is a striking way to teach truths which cannot be so effectively taught by other methods. Why not have statuary outside churches in Greater Boston representing "The Good Shepherd," "The Good Samaritan" and other biblical characters. Why not put our ideas in sculpture, instead of depending too much upon personality?

If we want to win children to good ideas we should keep truths before them in well executed sculpture. We have too many busts in our churches of departed rectors and laity. We want more ideas rendered permanent in stone or granite.

Objects to Canada as "Barroom of U. S."

Editor Boston American:

May I state in your paper that the mayor of Windsor, Ont., objects very strenuously to the sale of postal cards to American visitors, depicting Canada as "the barroom of the United States."

Minister's Sign Worked Wrong Way

Editor Boston American:

The minister in Greater Boston who placed on the bulletin board in front of his church the phrase: "Don't let the undertaker carry you to church," to drum up better church attendance on Sundays, hit the undertakers more than the people. After a conference with them he removed the sign.

Believes Mother Should Succeed Mrs. Barron

Editor Boston American:

Now that Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron declines re-election on the Boston School Board, let another mother be elected in her place.

Mrs. Barron when running for the School Board was advised by a Boston newspaper man to put on her campaign literature the phrase: "Put a Mother on the School Committee."

It worked well and Mrs. Barron was elected and confirmed the confidence placed in her ability.

Somerville Lifesavers Want Their Due

Editor Boston American:

During the summer months of the last two or three years, many of the heroic life guards of the beaches of Boston have come into their own in the newspapers. These were 95 per cent college men, heroes, Don Juans, Apollos and what have you.

For the first time in our memory Somerville Beach has appeared in the newspapers.

In the Boston Evening American of August 19 there is a story of the rescue of Nicholas Mina by a girl at Somerville Beach. The fact of that story is that the man was rescued about a quarter of a mile above Somerville Beach, and not at the beach.

Due to the fact that we have not had one drowning since we have been here (eight years) we feel the correction is justified.

Warns of Rapid Destruction of Forests

Editor Boston American:

I am glad to notice that your paper is paying some attention to forest destruction. The annual forest fire damage is appalling. Our virgin forests will be exhausted in about 20 or 30 years. The forests are being logged by private companies and 65% seldom left in a way which will ensure a new growth of timber.

Do all you can to warn the people who are careless with fire in the woods, for forests are being cut at the rate of five million to ten million acres a year.

Reader Wonders How Many Marriages Are Happy

Editor Boston American:

A company of middle-aged husbands were talking about marriage the other evening in the Boston City Club reading room. After much had been said, one man exclaimed, "My wife and I have been married 15 years and we have never had a cross word." That remark aroused another of the gang, who rose and said, "That is impossible. Either you are a terrible liar or you have lived a monotonous life."

With that he left the place, and nothing more was said. Do any of your readers think this type of married life is impossible?

In only 2 weeks

Socony Special plus Ethyl

has become the fastest-selling premium gasoline

Just two weeks ago we announced:

"We have added Ethyl anti-knock fluid to Socony Special, making the finest gasoline ever marketed in New England or New York. And at no additional cost to you."

IN two weeks Socony Special plus Ethyl has become the fastest-selling high-compression premium gasoline.

We knew this was going to happen. We knew it had to happen. It's hard to get a big sale on any new product which is only a little better. But when a product is so much better that every user can feel the difference, then it literally sells itself.

Socony Special alone was the best straight-run untreated gasoline that could be made. Thousands of motorists found it so good that they were glad to pay the extra cost.

But we were not satisfied.

There was just one thing that could be done to make it better and that was to add Ethyl anti-knock fluid.

Even a poor gasoline can be given a zero knock rating if enough Ethyl is added. However, a poor gasoline with a zero knock rating is still a poor gasoline.

Adding Ethyl to Socony Special meant taking the final bit of knock out of a smooth, even-burning, clean, wonderful gas. The result is just about perfection. You start with the smoothness of a summer breeze; you glide through traffic; you ease over the hills.

You get a "kick," a thrill, out of driving you never believed possible.

What ETHYL is

Ethyl fluid is the standard anti-knock compound, containing tetraethyl lead. It was developed in the General Motors Research Laboratories to meet the needs of the present-day high-compression motors.

Remember, it is the basic gasoline to which Ethyl fluid is added that determines the ultimate quality of an Ethyl gasoline. The Socony Special which you have been using was a superior high-compression gasoline. With the Ethyl fluid added, this new Socony Special will make old cars run like new cars, and will make new cars perform in a way that you have never known before.

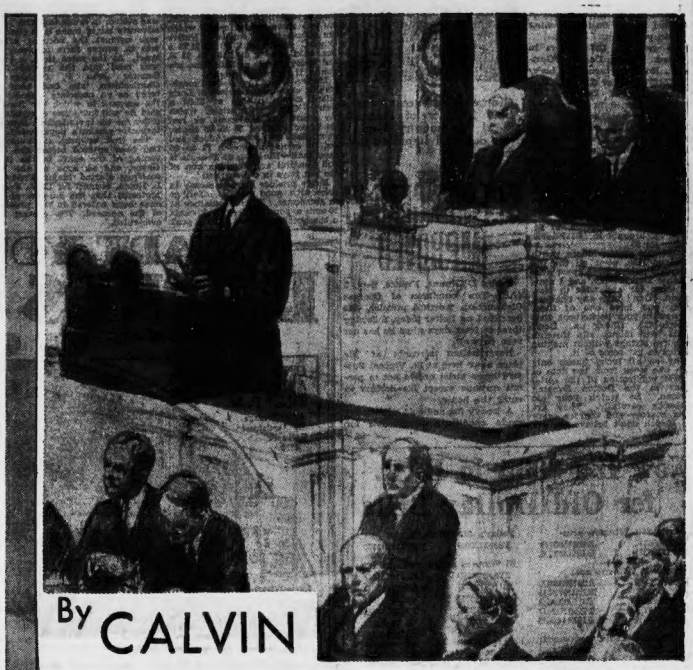
"WHAT IT MEANS TO BE PRESIDENT"



By CALVIN COOLIDGE

No laborer in the land works harder than the President of the United States! Calvin Coolidge has thrown open the doors of the White House so that a nation might glimpse the President in action. From the hour of his rising at six-thirty until he called it a day late at night, a vivid panorama of the nation's chief executive is portrayed in a revealing series of articles.

Never before has a former President written so intimately and humanly of the problems that beset him, of the little interludes of happiness that lighten the burden, and of the serious responsibility that hangs over his head, day and night. Read Calvin Coolidge's own story of his life in the White House—

FORD PLANS TO USE REFUSE

Detroit, Sept. 5—Henry Ford stands ready to take all the refuse from Detroit and neighboring municipalities and use it for the manufacture of greases and other by-products.

In an interview with Clyde Ford, mayor of Dearborn, Mich., the Free Press quotes the mayor as saying that he will request the Detroit City Council to meet with him and officials of other communities for the purpose of discussing the offer to be made by Ford.

Ford has such a refuse disposal plant as he plans for Detroit, in London, England.

Ford's projected offer, if carried out, would save the city of Detroit $2,000,000 annually, the Free Press will say.

WOMEN ASKED TO HELP N. E.

By NANCY BREWSTER

Watch Hill, R. I., Sept. 5—To meet a "serious problem," New England clubwomen gathered in conference were advised today to buy products of New England agriculture to the exclusion of similar products from outside areas whenever possible.

The advice was given by Mrs. Guy E. Speare, chairman of the 20th annual New England conference of State Federations of Women's Clubs, following an outline of this region's agricultural problems by Harry R. Lewis, Rhode Island commissioner of agriculture and chairman of the agriculture committee of the New England Council.

"New England's $350,000,000 a year agricultural industry faces a most serious and critical problem," Mr. Lewis told some 200 delegates gathered on the second day of a three-day meeting. "This problem," he said, "is the competition of agricultural producing areas of other parts of the United States flooding the New England market with products similar to those produced here.

"What we need in New England and what is rapidly being gained through the New England farm marketing program is more efficient marketing.

"New England comprises an immense foodstuffs consuming area. Its consumption requirements are far in excess of its present production or its future capacity to produce.

GOOD MILK SUPPLY.

"New England is almost self-sustaining when it comes to its milk supply, and that is as it should be, although some part is imported from other United States areas.

"When it comes to potatoes, $48,000,000 worth are produced in New England every year. Our $27,000,000-a-year poultry and egg production is not enough to meet our own demand and thousands of carloads are brought in to supplement the local supply. The latter is on the increase, however.

The Weather

For Boston and Vicinity—Occasional showers and somewhat warmer tonight and Friday, followed by a change to cooler late Friday night, moderate east winds shifting to southerly.

For Southern New England—Mostly cloudy, probably occasional showers tonight and Friday, somewhat warmer tonight in eastern Massachusetts, Friday cooler; Friday night moderate east shifting to south winds.

For Northern New England—Cloudy, probably occasional showers tonight and Friday, warmer tonight and in Maine Friday, cooler Friday in Vermont, moderate east shifting to southerly winds.

For Eastern New York—Mostly cloudy tonight and Friday, showers Friday and in northeast portion tonight; cooler Friday afternoon and night; gentle to moderate southerly winds shifting to northwest by Friday night.

OCEAN FORECAST

Steamers departing today for European ports will have gentle to moderate winds mostly east and southeast and overcast weather probably occasional showers and some fog in the Grand Banks.

SAVIN GGAME BY A SHIFT

Salient Points for Bidding

Auction: South's holding warrants not only an original bid of one Heart, but a rebid following an assist by North. West holds a defensive Spade overcall and two unsupported rebids. North holds two assists for Hearts. East holds a sound assist in Spades following West's second rebid, but not before.

Contract: Following South's bid of one Heart, West, holding at least seven probable tricks and high-card strength in three suits, makes a forcing overcall of two Spades. North, overcalling with three Hearts, East bids three Spades as with two probable tricks in support of Spades and West seven probable tricks shown by his forcing overcall, the combined hands should make at least three Spades.

South, holding one trick more than shown by his original bid, bids four Hearts and West, with nearer eight probable tricks than seven, bids four Spades, concluding the bidding.

The Play

North opens the 2 of Hearts, showing South four cards of his suit. South, winning with the Ace, knows that the 6 played by West is a singleton and therefore does not return a Heart, but takes advantage of being in the lead to play the 10 of Diamonds, leading up to a weakness in Dummy. This shift defeats the contract.

It may be noted that had North led the King of Hearts, such lead would have cost the game, as West could not then have been read as holding a singleton; and if Hearts were continued West could trump, drive out South's Ace of trumps and proceed to make four odd, through the discard of a Diamond on Dummy's long Club.

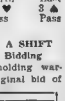
UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES

DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES



THE game sensation that has swept America. The rules are simple. You are given, for instance, the word "tear" to unscramble with the letter "h." The Anagramble is "heart." Similarly, to unscramble the word "link" with "s" the Anagramble is "slink."

Remember, you cannot make an Anagramble with a plural—"links" would be wrong. You have to change the complete meaning of the word—"slink" is therefore correct. Nor can you make a different tense of word. For instance, to unscramble "read" with "s" you cannot make it "reads."

You must change the complete meaning. The Anagramble, therefore, is "dears." Now try your hand at these Anagrambles:

(1) DEIGN—Unscramble it with an N.

(2) GREEN—Unscramble it with an A.

(3) SIMPER—Unscramble it with an S.

(4) HEALER—Unscramble it with a T.

(5) MODEL—Unscramble it with a Y.

Yesterday's Answers: 1—Reach with L is Choral. 2—Reveal with C. is Cleaver. 3—Tacit with S is Static. 4—Freak with S is Fakers. 5—Spoke with R is Pokers.

GOLF COURSE ROMANCE IN DANCE AND LYRIC

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

PERHAPS the most important thing about any musical comedy, its saving grace in time of peril, is the common agreement at the start that you are not expected to know what it is all about. That, naturally, lifts a heavy load at the beginning and makes fair promise of a lively encounter. A man in white flannels made some such remark as he left the Majestic last evening. Then he reminded his companion that "Follow Thru" was a bully show, anyway. He didn't have to know what it was all about; probably he didn't care a rap.

IT really would be hard to explain exactly how country club life in America enters into the general results gathered by "Follow Thru." Of course, the scenes are pitched in the front yard of a club where golf prevails, but you see mighty little of it. Considerable talk about rival championships and a putting tournament along toward the end of the show clean up about all the golf of the evening. All of the fun of "Follow Thru" is piled up in songs and dances, and a large variety of out-door romance. There is no bewildering plot to confuse the mind and I am pressed with the thought that "Follow Thru" would still have provided good entertainment if there had been no story at all, which was practically the case, anyway.

Nicholas Young

FORTUNATELY, however, there looms large and important in the operations the three composing demons of the Schwab and Mandel retinue—Messrs. De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, makers of melody that tickles the ear and lingers in the memory. What they have done for "Follow Thru" turns that piece to something, to be taken on sight and enjoyed to the last quivering note. But even good songs must have singers, and dance numbers without nimble toes would avail little to the plodding composer.

EXCEPT for the one scene showing a ladies' dressing room at the club house, which is successfully invaded by two naughty plumbers, the songs and dances prevail. The spoken comedy runs from farce to burlesque and is not generally impressive. But there are spots in great number to catch the ear; song specialties so aptly designed and presented that no one gives a hoot about the country club and its squabbling members. Martha Morton and Bobby Jarvis turn in two life savers in "Button Up Your Overcoat" and "I Could Give Up Anything But You"; Billy Moore and Ruth Tester almost draw curtain with "Then I'll Have Time For You," and Arthur Campbell and Beth Mankins amply blanket a lot more than dull courtship with their one big song, "You Wouldn't Fool Me, Would Ya?"

AND so "Follow Thru" rolls merrily along—always in good tune, even in its most confused moments. John Philbrick, a stoutish comedian, is the gay old chatterbox of the party, and Evelyn Kindler, tall, shapely and fair to look upon, not only dances in approved fashion but provides an attractive counter-figure in frequent ensembles. Good hot weather fare—that's "Follow Thru."

HIPPODROME BOSS BRINGS SHOW HERE

STEADFASTLY refusing to be stampeded into an acceptance of the current forms of entertainment and to a subjection to the taste to which they appeal, to the exclusion of wholesome forms appealing to decent instincts, R. H. Burnside, for years general stage director at the New York Hippodrome, has demonstrated in "Here and There" the soundness and irrefutability of his contentions. Having been for years the one-man head of the famous Hippodrome, until recently the country's largest theater, designing entertainment of the widest possible appeal, catering during the winter months to the same public the circus draws on throughout the summer, Mr. Burnside came to have a precision on mass taste and reaction to stage amusement.

R. H. Burnside

That he has been accurate in sizing up his public is attested by the enormous success of his hippodrome spectacle, "Here and There," which begins a limited engagement in the Boston Opera House during the evening. It is declared to be the largest show ever produced indoors.

Produced over the Atlantic City Auditorium, a newly erected exposition building and said to have a larger seating capacity than the amphitheaters and arenas of ancient Rome, "Here and There," in six weeks during the summer played to 250,000 people. The clicking turnstiles recording a quarter of a million paid admissions, covering a period of only six weeks, settled, for Producer Burnside anyhow, the question of whether or not there is today a large public for the famous Hippodrome type of show.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Burnside has produced every form of entertainment in the theatrical category — historical pageant, spectacle, society circus, straight drama, comedy, musical comedy, revue and motion pictures—and done them all equally well. His most recent operation on a vast scale was the Sesqui-Centennial spectacle, "Freedom," in Philadelphia.

"DANCE OF LIFE" FILM IS BIG SUCCESS

SOUND and color have been successfully combined on the same narrow strip of motion picture film and the sur-prisingly successful combination is now being shown at the Uptown and Washington St. Olympia in "The Dance of Life," the all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing picturization of the stage play, "Burlesque."

The perfected sound-and-color process has been used to photograph and record a lavish stage revue in "The Dance of Life." The stage and performers appear in natural colors, the brilliant jewels, the gorgeous gowns, the dancing choruses and beautiful settings. Eighty dancing girls are used in the production and the sound of their steps and voices are distinctly heard. A 32-piece orchestra and the song of a soloist are packed together on a single bit of celluloid scarcely more than an inch square.

The perfected system of combining sound and color on motion picture film is the work of scientists of the Technicolor Corporation, working with sound [illegible] of the Paramount studios.

NEW KEITH'S TO FEATURE MOVIES

ANSWERING the public demand for a season of greater singing, talking, dancing screen productions, the new B. F. Keith's on Saturday becomes one of the outstanding motion picture palaces of New England. On the program for the opening week is radio's super-production, "Street Girl," in which Betty Compson and Jack Oakie are the stars. The remainder of the program is to consist of selections from the best short subjected products available. The entire program is to be in sound, the theater having had installed the newest sound reproducing equipment, known as the RCA Photophone.

A radical change in prices takes place with the beginning of this new policy today with 30 cents admission for all seats from 10 o'clock in the morning until 1 o'clock in the afternoon; 50 cents for all seats from 1 o'clock until 6 o'clock and 65 cents for all seats after 6 o'clock until closing. On Sundays the price for all seats will be 65 cents. The performances will be continuous daily from 10 o'clock in the morning beginning today and on Sundays the performances will be continuous from 3 o'clock.

Scheduled to follow "Street Girl" will be "The Cock Eyed World," in which Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe again match their wits in bright dialogue.

Throughout the season important singing, talking and dancing pictures will be on the program, including such great productions as Florenz Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita," Rudy Vallee in "The Vagabond Lover," Vincent Youmans's "Fit the Deck," and other stage successes that have been made into screen productions.

BAND LEADER IS ATTACHED TO BOSTON

MANY years before Alex Keese, new stage band director at the Metropolitan, was born, New England played a part in his subsequently interesting career, which perhaps accounts for the fact that he has become an outstanding musical personality. A charming maiden, answering the name of Lucy Beall, journeyed from a Georgia plantation to the New England Conservatory of Music in 1895 to study piano and voice. Under Prof. Phaston she studied diligently, and completed a course which was followed by another in the Emerson School of Oratory. Completing this, she returned to the Southland, and became Mrs. Keese, now the proud mother of Alex.

Not only is Alex Keese a capable musical director, but he is also an accomplished violinist.

An appreciation of New England culture prompted his brother, William Keese, Jr., to enter Harvard, from whence he graduated with honors in the class of '25. He is a member of the Trident Club and the Old South Church. Being gifted with vocal talent, he sung in the Harvard Glee Club, and also in concerts at Symphony Hall and the Art Museum. He is also affiliated with the Cambridge Y. M. C. A.

"Narrow Street"

Edward Everett Horton has been selected to play the leading role in "The Narrow Street," based on the novel by Edward Bateman Morris, under the direction of Archie L. Mayo. James Starr and Arthur Caesar are writing the screen play and dialogue.

HERE'S MORE GOOD NEWS CONCERNING "STREET GIRL"
COMING TO THE NEW
B. F. KEITH'S

We just can't help saying again and again these words of wisdom and truth viz: you've seen the rest—NOW comes the best.

Even the great Webster himself would experience difficulty in finding adequate words to express the massiveness of Radio's giant screen classic, "STREET GIRL." George Bernard Shaw would have to do some heavy thinking if he were asked to describe this gorgeous creation of audible entertainment; a poet would be lost, seeking rhyming words of description and any writer of fiction would have accomplished his masterpiece could he have conceived this story before the present author.

The dialogue in "STREET GIRL" contains the last word. The artists, headed by BETTY COMPSON and JACK OAKIE have acted out this story to utmost perfection; the master minds of science have provided the most modern electrical device for perfect synchronization and audibility of sound and NOW, the most beautiful theatre in all the world is chosen as the setting for this jewel of the screen.

"STREET GIRL" will sway your every emotion. "STREET GIRL" will smash its way to record achievements at its premier at the NEW B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, when it opens at 10 A. M., be there and SEE.

Another great surprise awaits you all in the presentation of the world's most favorably talked of star—the crooning

North Shore Juniors Plan Many Benefits for Children's Hospital

THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL is just now the center of interest with groups of juniors along the North Shore who are taking active steps for its welfare. Last evening the C. H. Club of Manchester gave a large subscription dance at the Manchester Yacht Club in aid of the hospital. The enthusiastic committee in charge was amply rewarded by the outstanding success of the dance, to which subdebs from all parts of the shore flocked in great numbers. Misses Serita Bartlett, Katharine Hurtmyer, Anne B. Dick and Alice Ellsworth were assisted in making the arrangements by John Goodrich, T. Dennis Boardman, 2nd, William T Boardman, and Brinley M. Hall. Miss Bartlett was among those giving dinner parties before the dance.

ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON at 3 o'clock another group of juniors will present two plays, "Robin Hood" and "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," for the Children's Hospital, at the estate of Dr. and Mrs. George P Denny at Smith's Point, Manchester. The plays are under the direction of Mrs. Denny, who is acting as coach. These plays are an annual feature of North Shore entertainment, with the young folk taking the parts. The committee in charge of arrangements includes Miss Charlotte Denny, Miss Nancy Blumer, Miss Dorothy Potter, Master Edward T. Hall and Harvey H. Bundy, Jr., of Manchester, and Miss Emily Dick of Pride's Crossing. Master Bundy is the grandnephew of President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard and a grandson of Mrs. William Lowell Putnam of Boston.

SEVERAL EVENTS HAVE been arranged for the same hospital by the C. H. Club at Pocasset and Catsumet, among them a dance to be given tomorrow evening at the Megansett tea room. There will be golf and tennis tournaments, boat races, a food sale and a luncheon in aid of the hospital before the season closes. The Children's Hospital committee is headed by Mrs. John W. Hallowell, and those helping are Mrs. Francis Rackemann, Miss Elizabeth Bright, Miss Klamechs Austin, Mrs. John B Swift, Mrs. George B. Crompton, Miss Rosamond Lombard, Miss Susan Morse, Mrs. Orrin G. Wood and Mrs. Trowbridge Callaway.

MISS POLLY BEALE, WHO has been spending the summer at Sanborneville, N. H., was seen in town yesterday, having arrived the previous evening. Miss Judith Chase, who returned from abroad with her mother, Mrs. Walter G. Chase, recently after four months travel, has gone to Wiscasset, Me., for the late season and the Chase residence on Marlborough st, is not to be opened for another month. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dewart, Jr., have arrived in town and are settled in a Brookline apartment for the winter. Another who seeks the tang of autumn in other resorts is Mrs. Joshua Bennett Holden, who returned from Connecticut to go to Poland Spring immediately for the late season there.

MUCH INTEREST HAS BEEN aroused by the announcement of the rededication of the ancient Whipple house at Ipswich, to be held on the grounds next Tuesday afternoon under the auspices of the Ipswich Historical Society. This house, built in 1640, is one of the colonial landmarks treasured by the historical society and townsfolk. Mr. Sherman Whipple of Chestnut Hill, a descendant of the Whipple family, is to make the dedication speech.

MISS BARBARA B. ALDRCH yesterday became the bride of Alie B. Bassett of Montclair, N. J., at a Trinity Church ceremonial in Bridgewater with the Rev. James A. Thompson of Framingham, the former rector of Trinity, officiating. The bride was gowned in ivory crepe with a train of Florentine lace and a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies. Her sister, Miss Elise Aldrich, was her maid of honor and her bridesmaids were Misses Mary and Frances McElwain of Boston and Cohasset, Miss Ruth Biggs of Maumee, O., Miss Ruth Sutherland of Barnstable, Mrs. Robert B. Crane of East Orange, N. J., a sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Howard S. Allen of Hyde Park. The bridal party were gowned in fall shades of chiffon with brown turbans and each carried an old fashioned bouquet. Robert B. Crane attended Mr. Bassett as best man. The couple are to reside in Montclair, N. J., after October 1.

MANY BOSTON GUESTS ATTENDED the nuptials of Miss Katharine Amory, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Copley Amory of Washington, D. C., and Lieut. Douglas P. Smith, U. S. A., at the Unitarian Church in Walpole, N. H., yesterday. The bride, in princess net, was attended by Miss Susanne Bradley of Washington, who wore yellow chiffon made princess style. Lieut. Mark Smith served as his brother's best man, and the bride's brothers, Copley Amory, Jr., J. Forbes Amory and Thomas C. Amory, were the ushers. Following the ceremony a large reception was held at the Walpole Golf Club. The wedding trip will finally bring the couple to Fort Snelling, Minn., where Lieut. Smith will be stationed.

FLIER TELLS OF FOILING DEATH IN AIR CRASH

Los Angeles, Sept. 5 (AP)—Ward Miller, 23, airplane mechanic, was home today, recovering from the shock of his narrow escape from death in the fall of Maj. John Wood's racing plane near Needles, Cal., last Monday.

Miller, who arrived here after helping to find the tangled wreckage of the plane in which Wood and he were competing in a nonstop race from Los Angeles to Cleveland, told the detailed story of his experience.

"We were two hours out from Los Angeles," Miller said. "I was in the rear of the cabin, just before 3 a. m., and the major was at the controls. We were at 15,000 feet when we ran into a wind and lightning storm. The storm threw our ship into a spin.

"It was turned around a dozen times, dropping 2000 feet out of control. I was holding a flare chute, waiting for a signal from the major to drop it in order to light the ground for a forced landing. I waited for the signal, but it never came.

"At 13,000 feet a bolt of lightning hit the ship. The impact slammed me against the gas tank, and then right out into space. In the split second after I was flung out of the ship I had the presence of mind to pull the ripcord of my parachute. Then I passed out. It must have been only for a few seconds, because I came to on the way down, remaining conscious for about a minute, when I lapsed again."

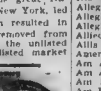
BOSTON'S BANK STOCKS MUCH IN DEMAND

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Not many months ago Charles E. Mitchell, former Boston banker, now chairman of the great National City Bank of New York, led the movement which resulted in bank stocks being removed from the "Big Board" to the unlisted market. In the unlisted market bank shares have done even better than Mr. Mitchell could have hoped. He buying has been tremendous.

Charles E. Mitchell



J. H. Perkins

It took Boston investors a long time to realize the shares of banks right here at home were selling out of line with those obtaining for like shares in other major financial centers. Even now some of the good Boston bank stocks are neglected, although most of this group are much in demand. Merger facts and merger rumors have been the usual effect of stimulating interest in Boston bank shares. That Boston banks are prospering as never before is unquestioned.

Mr. Mitchell, by the way, is also chairman of the City Bank Farmers' Trust Company in this post he is associated with the president of that institution, James H. Perkins. President Perkins was born in Milton and went to the public schools there and to the Milton Academy, and then to Harvard, from which he graduated in 1896. His first job was with Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., chocolate manufacturers, whose establishment occupies a large area in the neighborhood of Mr. Perkins' home town. At this time he was reading law, the soon became an executive. Still this business was not fully suited to his aims as he took a stronger leaning toward banking.

After seven years with the chocolate firm he joined the staff of the American Trust Company of Boston and after a few years there he was offered the vice-presidency of the National Commercial Bank of Albany and became its president of that bank in 1912 Two years later he received a call from the National City Bank, becoming a vice-president, and then executive manager.

Thus came the World War and with the entry of America into the conflict Mr. Perkins went to France. In 1918 he was given complete control of this country's European Red Cross organizations in September of the same year he became a colonel in the A. E F and was assigned to general headquarters at Chaumont as assistant chief of staff of the Second Army, later of the Third Army, or Army of Occupation at Coblenz.

On June 16, 1921, he was elected president and director of The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and when the affiliation of that institution with The National City Bank of New York was completed on June 29, 1920, he was made president and director of the City Bank Farmers Trust Company and a director of The National City City Bank of New York.

* * *

Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of National City Bank of New York, answering rumors concerning expansion plans of bank, said that none of supposed plans had any foundation, although it is usual for bonus constructive step to be proposed by directors before close of each year. It is believed that during Mitchell's absence with Morrow for two months, action will not be decided upon at least in that period. Whether recent rumor was that bank planned to form investment trust and would acquire control of chain banks throughout country, including largest bank in Chicago. Another rumor had it bank would increase capital from $110,000,000 to $250,000,000, giving shareholders right to purchase four new shares for each 11 held.

Edwin A. Benchley, for the past few years connected with the National Shawmut Bank, has joined the staff of F. S. Emery & Co., where he has been made a vice-president.

Chase National Bank and Chase Security Corp. quarterly dividend aggregating $1 on $20 par stock of bank and no-par stock of Security Corp., which is at rate of $4 annually, is the first dividend by the Chase since mergers with National Bank and American Express Co. The former Chase Bank stockholders present dividend means a larger distribution. Before stock was split five for one Chase paid dividends at $18 a year, including $4 by Chase Securities Corp., which is equivalent to $3.60 per annum on the new $20 par stock. Present dividend is equivalent to that received by former National Park stockholders.

Business Bureau Makes 2763 Reports in 4 Months

BOSTON BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU today makes public statistics and information on the operations of the financial division of the bureau for the four-month period, May, June, July and August, 1929.

During this period 2763 reports were issued, upon request, to inquirers. Information was also furnished in hundreds of inquiries who personally called at the Bureau offices. Reports issued are classified as to types, sources and districts as follows:

Mining Promotions	23
Oil Promotions	71
Industrial Companies	96
Finance and Mortgage	412
Investment Trusts	412
Security Dealers	388
Tipster Sheets-Services	1026
Miscellaneous	143
General Public	164
Employers	108
Banks	641
Brokers-Statistical	478
Better Business Bureaus	605
Officials	57
Publications	77
Metropolitan Boston	1323
Other Mass. Districts	722
Other States	664
Canada-Foreign	24

In the four months covered by this report 38 complaints regarding financial transactions of a varied nature were handled. Of these, three were referred after investigation to the Department of Public Utilities and eight to prosecuting and police authorities. The handling of other complaints resulted in adjustments involving refunds of monies in several instances and in 14 cases adjustments or explanations satisfactory to complainants were secured. Efforts to adjust two of the matters were unsuccessful. The balance remained pending at the end of the period.

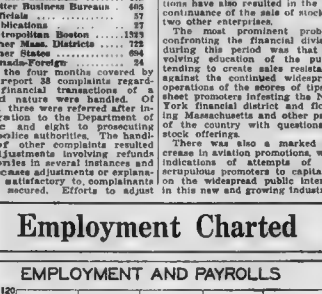
In continuation of its campaign of publicity and co-operation with the authorities, tending to the protection of the public from promotional activities subject of criticism, the division compiled for bureau bulletins, 14 articles dealing variously with the activities of 60 brokerage firms or individuals engaged in stock-selling activities, 37 stock promotions and 21 tipster sheet organizations. Articles on the subjects of tipster sheets, solicitation promotions, sales motor clubs and offerings of foreign Ford stocks were released to newspapers and prepared for broadcast over the radio.

Co-operation was extended the Department of Public Utilities in eight investigations, which have to date resulted in the revocation and cancelling of the registrations of three brokers and issuance of findings banning the sale of stock in two promotions. Those investigations have also resulted in the discontinuance of the sale of stock in two other enterprises.

The most prominent problem confronting the financial division during this period was that involving education of the public tending to create sales resistance against the continued widespread operations of the scores of tipster sheet promoters infesting the New York financial district and flooding Massachusetts and other parts of the country with questionable stock offerings.

There was also a marked increase in advertising of fraudulent and unscrupulous promoters to capitalize on the widespread public interest in this new and growing industry.

Employment Charted



The seasonal decline in factory employment and payrolls is less pronounced than in the three years preceding, as indicated in the accompanying chart prepared by the Exchange Trust Company.

Employment in the iron and steel, automobile, and most manufacturing lines held a high level of activity throughout the summer, as the chart indicates, the index of payrolls, as reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, has had a remarkable rise since early in the year.

It is at a higher point than it has been at any time since the fall of 1923.

COPPER BUYING SETS RECORD

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—All records for copper buying were broken in the past week when domestic buyers entered the market for 100,000 tons, Engineering and Mining Journal reports. This figure is almost double the previous record of 56,000 tons, sold in the week of December 26, 1928.

Automobile production in August totaled 516,522 units, it was estimated by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. In July 537,192 cars were produced, while in the August, 1928, figures was 402,843.

Canada is minting big nickels, which look like quarters.

That's one way to help the farmers.

In this country we do things differently—we mint quarters that look like nickels—to the butchers.

Rothman intimated that the wedding will be no secret or small affair, but will be one of some moment and attended by film colony notables as well as prominent stage folk. He said that he and his bride, Clara Bow, would prefer a simple ceremony, but that friends had resisted any such plan.

SUCCESS TO HILDRED! SHE'S OFF FOR DES MOINES!

Home Girl Gets Nice Notice in Lamar, Mo., Paper

(Lamar, Missouri, Democrat)

Miss Hildred Browns left early Saturday morning for Des Moines Ia., where she expects to enter Business College. Miss Hildred is a very attractive girl in her teens. She is also very ambitious to fit herself for some useful work. She will take Physical Culture.

Hildred has early learned the lesson that only those who have an abundance of nerve, will power and courage will succeed to any degree. All these virtues she possesses and many more.

Hildred is a bright, worthy young girl and while her friends regret to lose her they are glad for her sake that she has such a wonderful opportunity. She says she knows a life worth living is not filled with flowery beds of ease. If we dig through the tough, thorny places they will make pleasure for us later on. "Always bear the cross patiently and receive a crown." Success to one who deserves it, Hildred.

A Friend.

HUNT STABBER IN HOLDUP

An all-night search by the State and Fitchburg police for the assailant of Eza Suttala, Westminster laborer, had failed to bring about the man's capture early today.

Suttala, who was stabbed twice in the neck and received treatment in the out-patient ward of the Burbank Hospital in Fitchburg, was unable to furnish the police with any clue that might help in identifying the man who stabbed him.

Although the police were first inclined to believe that robbery was the motive, they are now of the opinion that some person with a grudge against Suttala had attempted to stab him to death.

Plane Will Land Mail Here From Bremen

Boston, on the next westbound trip of the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, will receive air mail from Europe five hours earlier than usual. A seaplane will be catapulted from the deck of the vessel while she is still a day's sailing from port. The plane will land in Boston harbor and mail rushed to the postoffice for immediate delivery.

The same procedure was carried out with New York as the landing port on the Bremen's last trip from Germany.

Hoover to Foot Bills for Mountain School

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP)—Associates of President Hoover say he plans no general appeal to the public for funds with which to build and equip a schoolhouse for children living in the mountains in the region of his fishing camp on the the Rapidan river in Virginia.

Instead, the chief executive proposes to supply the $1200 or $1500 needed from his personal funds, or with the help of a small circle of intimate friends.

Wellesley Woman Left $124,000 Estate

Personal estate amounting to $124,420 is the property left by Sarah A. A. Bristol Smith of Wellesley. This was made known by an inventory filed in probate court at Dedham by Daniel J. Lyne, Stuart C. Woodworth and Clifford L. Russell, appraisers.

HOGS STOLEN BY HI-JACKERS

Chicago, Sept. 5 (AP)—Things have come to a pretty pass in Chicago, with farmers unable to market their livestock for fear of highway robbers.

A truck load of 80 hogs worth $2000 was hi-jacked by thieves today.

A trio of robbers drove alongside the truck headed for a stockyards packing company and forced it to the curb. Two of the robbers held the truck driver, Frank Tronsy, captive while the third man drove off with the truck. Tronsy later was freed and reported the robbery to the police.

TELLS OF $40,000 WASTED IN MOSQUITO WAR

BOSTON DAY by DAY

By FRED TOYE

HAVE YOU ever met a person who starts to say things and never—There is a brilliant Boston woman so full of the business of living that the days aren't—There'd be a fortune for someone who could write things just the—Today she went shopping and found the darlingest evening dresses marked down from $35 to—But size 38 was the—However, there's a man in the store who goes to Paris three times a year and he knows exactly the kind she—And stockings were marked down to $1.98. Aren't they lovely? No, they're not old stock they're—All the salespeople are so—Anyway, they ought to be; she's had a what-you-callit there for—

A WELL-KNOWN Boston politician talks that way. His thoughts come so rapidly that words simply cannot keep pace. His sentences all hang suspended in mid-air. Strangely enough, you know exactly what he means. His jerky style is like a dizzy ride down Tremont st. in thick traffic with throttle wide open and brakes jammed on every couple of seconds. During a recent public address a reporter in the audience timed him with a stopwatch. In exactly 10 minutes he had introduced 14 separate ideas, and never completed a phrase, yet his ideas got across. Persons who think so fast leave the ordinary citizen gasping in the rear. The reporter who timed the politician has a sister-in-law who holds the world's record for rapid speech. He declares that on one occasion he heard two words come from her lips at the same time.

TEACHING is losing its appeal to the rising generation as a life work, according to Prof. T. D. M. Ford-Smith, professor of Romance Languages at Harvard, and successor to Henry W. Longfellow in that chair. "We are not able to supply one-third of all the calls for teachers that are made upon us each year by educational institutions throughout the country," he says. "Twenty-five years ago, perhaps 30 or 35 per cent of all college graduates went into teaching. Today only about 7 per cent take up that work. In years past, many youths were forced into the teaching career because of the unwillingness of business men to recognize their merit. There is no fear of such a situation these days, and more than one-half of our graduates go into business."

A BASHFUL BANKER seems to be an anomaly. Frederick T. Monroe, treasurer of the Exchange Trust Company, however, admits that modesty overcame him when, as a young clerk, he officiated for the first time in the opening of a checking account. The customer was a young woman. The bashful banker asked for her full name, which she gave.

"I didn't want to ask her bluntly how old she was," he narrates. "So I asked her the date of her birth. She gave me the full particulars."

"And your weight?" I asked."

"Let me see," she pondered. "I think it was exactly seven pounds."

NEW ENGLAND Gravenstein apples are coming into the market. Every year sees our local apples recapturing more and more of the esteem which they held in years gone by. Growers are giving greater attention to the fine quality and careful packing, with the encouragement and assistance of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture. The Massachusetts apple belt is one of the most delightful regions in the New England states. In Lexington, Concord, Harvard, Hopkinton, Lancaster, and as far as the Berkshires, great orchards are receiving the scientific care and culture which have heretofore been typical of the West.

A BOSTON financier who operates a 300-acre orchard near Pittsfield explains the superiority in the flavor of New England apples over Western fruit. Apples lose greatly in evaporation, he says. The flavor departs when evaporation has continued over a long period. A box of apples can lose several pounds in weight in storage. Consequently the fresher New England products have more juice and aroma than those brought from great distances. It is thought, too, that peculiarities of the New England soil have much to do with giving New England apples their tang.

Given Five Years for Third Auto Theft

For a third offence of stealing automobiles James J. Brown of Harrison ave. was sentenced by Chief Justice Hall in Superior Criminal Court to serve from four to five years in the State Prison. The charge against Brown was larceny on June 29 of an automobile valued at $700.

SAYS $40,000 IS LOST IN WAR ON MOSQUITOES

State Expert Reveals How Cities and Towns Are Wasting Money

More than $40,000 has been wasted this year in Massachusetts in futile and ill-advised attempts to control mosquitoes, according to L. B. Boston of the state reclamation board.

He says a careful analysis of the results accomplished, made by engineers and entomologists of the state board, indicates that not more than $20,000 of the $60,000 appropriated by 30 cities and towns of this state has been spent effectively.

Bodies of water where mosquitoes were not breeding were oiled and attempts made to wipe out varieties of mosquitoes that do not bite human beings, according to Mr. Boston. He also said oiling was resorted to where the real remedy would have been ditching and draining.

"The only proper way to control mosquitoes," said Mr. Boston, "is to eliminate their breeding places by studying each local condition and develop a plan accordingly. It is futile to wait until mosquitoes are on the wing. The futile and ill-advised attempts at control in which many cities and towns have indulged are worse than useless."

Mr. Boston said the way to approach the problem is in the manner adopted by Cape Cod towns which have arranged a systematic long time program in conjunction with the State reclamation board.

DRUNK NAPS AS HOUSE BURNS

Newburyport, Sept. 5—Martin Pasukonis of Rowley, who was in the district court charged with drunkenness, was the surprise of his life when informed by Policeman Ricker of Rowley that while he was sleeping off his "jag" in the police station here, the house in which he lived at Rowley was burned and his family made homeless.

Pasukonis was one of several drunks the police rounded up. Special Justice Nelson placed the case on file.

Women Democrats to Stage Big Fete

The Women's Democratic Club of Massachusetts, Inc., will have its annual garden fete, Saturday, on the grounds of the Kelley estate, on Morse st., Watertown. It is expected there will be a large number present from all parts of the state.

Former Mayor Curley will be present and will speak. Other prominent Democrats have been extended invitations and many of them are expected.

Veteran's Death Is Laid to Fall

The death of Peter Doliver, 35, of Madison ave., Cambridge, was found to be due to "accidental falling," according to Medical Examiner David C. Dow.

Doliver, who was a World War veteran with several decorations for bravery, was found on the sidewalk in front of the Veterans' of Foreign Wars quarters, 595 Massachusetts ave., Cambridge.

Quincy House Fate Up for Settlement

Whether the Quincy House will finally close its doors this month will probably be decided definitely today, at a conference between the owners of the property.

The present operators of the hotel, the Quincy Hotel Corporation, will not renew their lease when it expires September 25. In fact, the operators of the hotel have served notice on the guests to vacate by September 11.

Officer Nabs Speeder Three Times in Week

A forced legal acquaintanceship between Christos Kallelis of Peabody and Motorcycle Officer Henry J. Wall of the Lynn police threatened by no means to rival that of Damon and Pythias.

The two were in the Lynn district court again today for the third time within a week, Kallelis for speeding and Officer Wall for making the arrest. The motorist from Peabody handed over $75 in fines.

Wall caught Kallelis for the first time just a week ago today and a fine of $10 was meted out to the latter for operating his motor car too fast. The following day he was caught again. The same thing happened Saturday. Officer Wall was the arresting agent in each case.

The latter two cases came up today. Kallelis paid $25 for Friday's misdemeanor and $50 for undue haste on Saturday.

Deposed Head of Liquor Squad Still on Bed of Pain

MYSTERY AUTO SMASHES HIKER

Hingham police are questioning H. J. Dunn of Rockland to determine whether his motor car is the one which unwittingly struck Tannett N. Allen of Canterbury st., Hingham, while the latter was walking on Hull st. toward the North Cohasset station today.

Allen is at Cohasset hospital. He has a fractured skull and multiple injuries.

Shortly after Allen had been struck, Dunn's car crashed into the railroad crossing gates in a thick fog at the station. He gave his name to the crossing tender and expressed a willingness to pay for the damage.

A truck driver found Allen's body in the roadway and rushed him to the hospital. It is believed Dunn may have run into Allen without knowing it because of the fog.

FILM FANS ARE DRIVEN OUT

More than 500 patrons were driven out of the Dorchester Theater, Dorchester ave., when a chemical was spilled on the floor. A pint bottle containing a small amount of the liquid was found on the floor of the theater near seats occupied by two men and a woman who had left the theater.

The theater was filled to capacity when the two men and the woman, who had been occupying seats in the rear of the orchestra, arose and left the building hurriedly. They were seen to get into an automobile and drive off.

Investigation by the manager disclosed that about a pint of the chemical had been spilled under the rear rows of seats.

No Action on El

Following a session of over two hours in Wells Memorial building, it was announced that the legislative committee of the Boston Central Labor Union, appointed to investigate the Boston Elevated Railway situation as to ownership and control, had taken no action in the matter.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

Policeman Nabs Lynn Horse With 'Lasso'

If Policeman R. Hubbard loses his job in Lynn he might get another in a Wild West show.

Lynn police headquarters was notified by telephone that a white horse was roaming the streets.

Motorcycle Officer William Gillespie, with Hubbard on the rear seat, went to Lynwood st. They did not find a white horse, but they did see a big bay that they tried to catch for a time in vain. Hubbard then borrowed a clothesline and improvised a lasso, then resumed the chase. As the horse galloped wildly along Lynnwood st Gillespie drove his motorcycle close and Hubbard threw the loop over the horse's head.

In court today Philip Shapiro of Flint st., Lynn, denied owning the horse and was found not guilty of allowing it to roam at large unattended. Shapiro said he had not owned a horse for 15 years. He explained that the horse in question, although kept in his barn, is owned by a friend.

WANTS CASH HE GAVE WIFE

Alleging that his wife has possession of the bank book representing various sums he has intrusted to her, and that he is unable to get it and therefore cannot withdraw any of his money, Leon J. Fortin, Medford, has brought a bill in equity in Middlesex Superior Court asking that his mate and the Medford Trust Company be restrained from disturbing the account.

The bill also asks that the court issue any order that justice may require.

A hearing on the bill is scheduled for tomorrow morning before Judge Greenhalge.

New Haven Rebuilds 12,000 Box Cars

The $11,000,000 special improvement program of the New Haven Railroad, recently announced, reveals that 12,000 practically new box cars have been provided by the rebuilding of old ones.

A five-year program of rebuilding and modernizing coal cars was started this year. Thus far 700 additional cars were included, making 3200 coal cars made new in 1929.

BIG GAS MAIN SAVES TRUCK

For the second time in 10 days the large gas main that parallels Malden bridge, Charlestown, today saved an automobile driver from a watery grave.

The empty 2½-ton truck, operated by John J. Rooney of 476 Huntington ave., Hyde Park, skidded on wet trolley-car tracks, crashed through the wooden fence and, when it stopped, the front wheels were resting on the big gas main, which is two feet from the edge of the bridge. Rooney was not injured.

A week ago last Saturday a large sedan with four tourists, bound for Maine on vacation, had a similar experience. The car skidded in the trolley-car rail and went through the bridge fence in exactly the same manner. The gas main saved it from plunging into the river.

SAYS GARRETT CAN QUIT IF HE WANTS TO

Crowley Tells Why Captain Was Sent to Home of Injured Officer

The mystery surrounding the alleged offer of Patrolman Oliver B. Garrett, deposed head of the liquor squad, to resign from the department persisted today, even after Police Commissioner Wilson, Superintendent of Police Crowley and Police Capt. James McDevitt of the Jov st. station were in conference.

When Superintendent Crowley came out of the commissioner's office he was asked whether there were any new developments in the Garrett story.

"What story?" the superintendent returned.

"The story that Officer Garrett offered to resign."

Superintendent Crowley replied: "If there is, I have heard nothing about it. Officer Garrett is the same as any other policeman in the department. There is a blank for him to fill out if he wishes to resign. It is not necessary to tell him that; he knows all about it."

"I sent Capt. McDevitt to Weymouth the other day. After reading in a morning newspaper that Garrett was going to drive a horse at the fair, I told him to go there. I knew Garrett had been seriously injured at Marshfield. I would have been lax in my duties if I had not sent a police official to see whether Garrett drove any horses at the fair.

"As far as the incident concerning an injury to an officer, Garrett knows the rules and regulations. It was up to his commanding officer to get a report of the injury within 48 hours of the time the officer was due to report back for duty. This is necessary in order that the officer receive compensation from the force. That's why McDevitt visited Officer Garrett at his home yesterday.

"Because of the seriousness of his injury we could not interrogate Officer Garrett before yesterday. A season ticket-holder gave us permission, Capt. McDevitt saw Officer Garrett. That is all I care to say about the matter."

'TEACHERS ARE UNFIT,' SAYS H. R. BURDICK

Art Club Members to 'Expose' Methods of Instruction at Malden Meeting

An expose of the methods of teaching art, a required subject for more than 50 years in the Massachusetts public schools is promised by H. R. Burdick, member of the Boston Art Club board of judges, when he addresses the Malden school board tomorrow night.

It is charged that the city of Boston alone unnecessarily expends $30,000 each year on art teachers, the majority of whom are unfit as instructors.

Mr. Burdick's address is promised as the first of a series by interested members of the Boston Art Club, who are anxious to remedy at least one fault with the present system of education.

W. Loring Adams of Malden, another member of the art club, declares the chief trouble to lie with the various art schools.

Would-be artists, he says, attend the schools with the intention of painting or drawing.

Failing in this, they are advised to take up the teaching of drawing in the public schools. As a result the subject is most inadequately handled.

Ship-to-Shore Air Mail for Boston Soon

The ship-to-shore air mail plane, New York, will fly to Boston on the next westbound trip of the steamship Bremen of the North German Lloyd, due in New York on September 10, the Aviation Bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce announced.

By flying to Boston it is possible for the mail to be delivered in New York five hours earlier than if the plane were to fly direct to New York. This is due to the fact that the plane can leave the steamer seven hours earlier when coming here.

FOREST FLAME FIGHTERS WIN HARD BATTLE, SAVE BIG AREA

CONTROL FIRES IN WEST PART OF STATE

Factories Lend Their Forces to Aid Battle; Men Are Near Exhaustion

Marked improvement in the forest fire situation in Western Massachusetts was reported today.

Strenuous work through the night by largely augmented crews, many of them detailed from manufacturing concerns in the area, appeared to have won out. Many of the crews labored to the point of exhaustion. It was said nearly all fires would be under control by nightfall unless unforeseen factors developed.

In his efforts to cope with the situation, Commissioner William A. L. Baxley issued appeals to the public to help safeguard the woods and has sent instructions to his wardens urging every precaution be taken to meet the alarming situation.

On the North Adams side of Mt. Greylock the fire has been extinguished. On the Williamstown side, however, the situation was more appalling. The flames today were reported spreading into Vermont.

Fire Warden George Walker of Williamstown was taken to his home exhausted. He had been in the thick of the fight for nearly 18 hours.

High tension power lines are threatened and emergency equipment is ready for installation.

The Selectmen of Clarksburg, north of the Greylock fire area, reported to have asked Governor Weeks of Vermont to bar fern pickers from the Vermont forest.

Fire Chief John E Saulnier of Clarksburg has received reports that some of the fires in that section were of incendiary origin.

Blazing Forests Peril to Wide Area on Atlantic Seaboard

New York, Sept 5 (AP)—Rain to fill reservoirs, extinguish forest fires and cool blistering city streets was an acute need throughout eastern States today.

Four days of unprecedented heat, which set new September temperature records, aggravated the water shortage which centered in the difficulties of forest fire fighters.

Forests in Pennsylvania were ablaze in several hundred places the flames being nearly uncontrollable.

According to an opinion handed down to the Cambridge Election Commissioners by City Solicitor Peter J. Nelligan of that city, Russell A. Wood, candidate for mayor of Cambridge, is disqualified to hold that office because he is a member of the school committee, with two more years to serve.

Wood, despite the ruling of the city solicitor, said he will continue to campaign for the office.

RESCUED CREW FOUGHT DEATH IN DORIES

Skipper and Six Men of the Schooner Zilpha Are Landed in Boston

Snatched from death by fire and water, Capt. William Tobey of the Boston fishing schooner Zilpha and his crew of six men arrived in Boston today aboard the steamship Yarmouth from Yarmouth, N. S.

The crew rowed to safety from a point 13 miles off Yarmouth when their vessel caught fire from an explosion, burned to the water's edge and sank.

The rescued men were Oscar Burke of Sargent st., Henry Barrett of Taylor st., George Kimmence of Prospect st., and Lee Cavanaugh of Myrtle sq., all of Gloucester; Archie Stevens of Broadway, Somerville, and Elliot Mason of Nova Scotia.

"We had 14 swordfish aboard when a flash shot out from the gasoline engine," Capt. Tobey said. "In less than a minute the ship was an inferno. Flames leaped to almost every part of it, followed by a roar that deafened us.

"Nothing could stop that fire, so I ordered the men to leave in the small boats."

Two dories were sent out from the ship, the men hardly having time to save their belongings. For hours the crews of the dories battled their way toward shore. They were finally picked up by a small motorboat and taken into Yarmouth.

GLYNN PLEDGES CURLEY AID IN REGISTRATION

Crowd Cheers as Ex-Fire Department Head and the Former Mayor Confer

Former Mayor James M. Curley looked from the desk at his headquarters, 23 Province st., today, to learn the reason for hearty applauding.

He saw former Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn approaching. Mr. Curley thrust out his hand. Mr. Curley grasped it. The crowd cheered.

The former mayor's greeting was, "How are you?"

To which Glynn replied, "Nicely, Mr. Mayor."

FOR REGISTRATION

The two former political opponents conversed for several moments. Curley asked Glynn to cooperate with Senator Michael J. Ward, former Senator Edward McLaughlin and Joseph Maynard, former chairman of the Democratic city committee in registering voters. Glynn accepted and promised to throw himself into the work at once.

"I read your letter in today's paper," Curley said, "and I think it an excellent summary of the present situation. After all, it is about time we put an end to outside influence in the conduct of officials who interfere with home rule in Boston.

MAY EXCEED 300,000

"You know what times we used to have in the old ward in the fight to gain registration. You realize that some 39,000 voters have been dropped from the lists this year, some through removal to other parts and some through death. I believe 20,000 can be restored through new arrivals.

"It is most important in this campaign that you make an effort to exceed the 300,000 registration mark made last year."

"Mr. Maynard, former chairman of the Democratic city committee, is in general charge of this work and I am sure you four gentlemen are in a position to draw back many who have gone away from lack of interest."

EXPERT DECLARES CONSUMER CREDIT IS GREAT AID TO BUSINESS

CHAIN STORES DEFENDED AT CONFERENCE

Independent Concerns Also Upheld at Final Session of Retail Men

A defense of chain stores, a defense of the independent store battling them for existence, and an enlightening discussion on consumer credit occupied the attention of 400 merchandise chiefs today at the retail distribution conference at University Club.

Principal speakers were Earl C. Sams, president of J. C. Penny Co., who defended the chain stores; Joseph H. Appel, John Wanamaker's, who presented the angle of the independent store, and Julian Goldman, president of Julian Goldman Stores, Inc., who analyzed the consumer credit.

The session was the last of the conferences sponsored by the retail trade board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Julian Goldman

"Consumer credit is helping, in a most emphatic manner, to mould the American people as a nation."

After tracing the development of consumer credit from its birth in Rome before the dawn of the Christian era though the ages to the extraordinary development during the past seven years, Mr. Goldman astounded his listeners with an estimate of $7,000,000,000 as the consumer credit in this country for the years 1927 and 1928.

"The grand total of business credits is estimated at $30,000,000,000. Thus we observe that the American wage earners are assuming a great responsibility when they are responsible for 23 per cent of the entire business credit."

This situation has no dangerous aspects for producers and distributors except through bad management and poor judgment, he said.

CALLS FEARS GROUNDLESS.

Among other speakers were Godfrey M. Lebhar, editor of Chain Store Age; F. W. Aldred, treasurer, Gladding, Providence, R. I.; Philip LeBoutillier, president, Best & Co., New York; Frank A. Krim, president, Denholm & McKay, Worcester; W. T. Grant, president, W. T. Grant Co; Edward R. Mitten, Jordan Marsh Co.; Hildthwaite Sherrill, Chandler & Co.; Thorndike Deland, New York, and T. Graham Babcock, president, D. R. Emerson Co., Boston.

President Sams, head of the great Penny chain, in his defense of chain stores, said: "A considerable number are too greatly disturbed by the rumor that the chain store is out to consume the business of the independent merchant. But already large percentages of independent merchants are proving to themselves that their early fears were groundless.

"There is a great unexplored area that awaits development for the aggressive merchandiser, for the possibilities of constructive merchandising greatly outweigh any necessity for giving way before the groundless rumors that are currently afloat.

"Progress will be made in the general merchandising field along the same lines that it is being made in the automobile manufacturing field.

MUST RENDER SERVICE

"No one can deny a man success if he will render the service to his patrons that is needed in an intelligent and economic manner.

"The success of chain stores is not governed solely by the sum total of financial resources that as merchandising groups can command. Money of itself does not make more money."

the five independent, Mr. Appel, the Wanamaker official, asserted. "Chain stores," he said, "cater to mass demand, to volume business. They supply standardized products and mainly things that can be carried home.

"They standardize everything—goods, service, demand, rate. The public demands more personal service and is content to pay for it. Specialty stores have become the very eyes of the big general stores without meeting competition in price.

"The independent store is gaining in the battle to hold down overhead expenses in comparison with the chain store," the speaker said. "It is significant," he said, "that the Harvard University Bureau of Business Research finds that for 1928 the ratio of operating cost in chain stores had risen and that of the independent store had fallen."

"The consumer, whose main asset is his earning power, can never dissipate that which is a God-given asset; a desire to live and enjoy the pleasures of life. And while he is possessive of that feeling, he must always work. His assets can never be dissipated and as long as he lives, continually producing, with a desire to work, he is in a position to pay for just obligations."

The best evidence of this, he pointed out, is the increase in savings accounts and totals and in insurance, building and loan associations and labor banks.

He said newspaper advertising was an effective means of conveying a message to the public.

Mr. Goldman said he urged on [illegible] Secretary of Commerce [illegible] in 1924 in calling [illegible] national installment selling conference under the auspices of the Department of Commerce for the consideration of problems facing the nation in the astounding development of the credit system.

"President Hoover agreed cordially in principal, but took the position that such a conference should be called by the United States Chamber of Commerce or a like organization. And so this important matter stands today—awaiting definite action.

He continued: "Among the benefits of installment selling is the eradication of Bolshevism in this country. The radical has lost his greatest weapon."

WASHBURN WILL INSIST ON VOTE ON LIGGETT

Roosevelt Club President Refuses to Drop His Drive Against G. O. P. Chairman

"Yes, I have been importuned," he said, "to forget it. I received a letter from Francis Prescott, formerly chairman of the Republican State committee, saying that he believed Liggett is the greatest asset the Republic party has in Massachusetts; and that I was showing ingratitude in suggesting that he should resign, because if it hadn't been for Liggett I wouldn't have been permitted to preside at the Borah meeting in the last campaign

"But I have received also—and you'd be surprised if I should tell you the names of the people who sent them to me—many words of commendation for my attitude in this matter.

"I am determined to go through with my announced intention of presenting my motion."

Washburn planned to talk the situation over with John Richardson, who was head of the Hoover volunteers committee in the last campaign, and recently conferred on the Massachusetts situation at the White House. Richardson is in New York on a business trip and is not expected home for a few days.

Woman's Leg Broken in Skidding Crash

Slippery trolley tracks caused an automobile crash in Winthrop st., Medford, near the Winchester line, today which sent Mrs Rosie Warner, 52, of Powder House boulevard, Somerville, to Winchester Hospital with a broken leg and fractured ribs.

STOMACH TROUBLE?

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" AND "TOO MUCH ACID" CAUSE 9 OUT OF EVERY 10 ATTACKS

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" (failure to digest starches), causes more than one-half the cases of stomach trouble, because at this deficiency, potatoes, breads, macaroni, rice, breakfast cereals and other starchy foods remain in a semi-solid condition and refuse to move on as they should. This stagnant condition causes INDIGESTION, GAS, FERMENTATION, SOURNESS, SICK HEADACHE and other common troubles

"TOO MUCH ACID" is the cause of almost all the remaining half of our stomach ills. It also is the result of fermentation and excess digestive acids

ACIDINE, the new discovery, is a perfect anti-acid combined with "Taka-a-mine," the most effective known starch digestant, one pound of which will digest more than 800 pounds of starchy foods.

ACIDINE is the FIRST COMPLETE REMEDY for STOMACH TROUBLE—an ANTI-ACID, STARCH DIGESTANT, MEAT DIGESTANT. At the same time it is safe and soothing to the most sensitive stomach. Slightly laxative but not unpleasantly so.

A Few Observations After the Runyon Manner Very Much After

No Boston Night Life Nor Gathering Spot Press Club Needed

NICK FLATLEY

RANDOM THOUGHTS THAT COME TO ONE

BOSTON has no hangout, where the boys collect after hours to discuss this and that. Which makes life hard for the sport reporter these days.

Was a time when a bird could collect enough typewriter pabulum for a week by dropping in at Woodbury's or the Arch Inn for an hour or so, and the accompanying snifters.

Might be a good idea for someone to start a press club—a real one—where the visiting firemen and celebs could congregate to shake off the masks and chatter au naturel.

Jimmy Gallagher is our nomination for the perpetual youth title. He keeps on the hop 20 hours a day, broadcasts, orchestrizes, and never misses a sporting event. And how young he looks, too.

The busiest boxing manager is Dan Carroll, who keeps his big stable working steadily, hither and yon. Dan incidentally, has more good rackets than anybody else we know.

Ed Morris is the most old fashioned of the ball players. He'll sit down and chew baseball, hours on end, just like the boys of the good days. A few more of the same brand wouldn't hurt the dear old pastime.

THE JUDGE AND BOB TWO GREAT OPTIMISTS

JUDGE FUCHS and Bob Quinn lead the optimist league. Either can dig up a grin and a funny story any old time. And each has plenty of worry.

Night life in Boston is found mostly on the Common. No spots like New York's Tavern, or Jimmie Kelly's. The troupers play a few of the night sandwich slabs, but put no real kick in it.

Joe McKenney is the most silent of the football coaches, and large Ed Robinson, the chattiest. But they'll all broadcast their sport, given the proper jab.

Honeyboy Finnegan shows fewer scars than any scrapper who has been over the long ring trail. King Solomon has the most scrambled pan.

Bill Cunningham is the best of the impromptu after dinner speakers. He thinks faster on his feet than a tap dancer Your correspondent is the worst, without contest.

One of the brightest sport cols started recently is contributed by Dave Egan, who is a good reporter with a sense of humor. There's plenty to laugh off, and at, in sports.

Country's smartest promoter is Paul Bowser. He runs his wrasslers, pays no attention to interference, and collects regularly.

SARAH PALFREY TAKING SPOTLIGHT FROM HELEN

LITTLE Sarah Palfrey is the most talked of girl in the country just now. Her surge into tennis glory is stealing the spotlight away from the great Helen, who has been on the pinnacle so long that she's taken for granted.

Two former athletes who laugh at the years are Ralph Gilroy and Herb Treat, the Princeton pair. Both keep their youthful looks and enthusiasms. It's a gift.

Moody Gus Daly has more dope on the horses than any man in town. And probably is the worst picker.

Commissioner Dan Lane of the Boxing Board is the Hub's sport Beau Brummel. When Dan wears 'em they're right. Bill Kennedy, Sharkey's pal, is the niftiest dresser of the steady fans.

Burt Nicoll of Belmont Spring gives more golf lessons than any of the pros. And Matt Campbell of the club throws more dinners than any other manager.

The leading philosopher is Nat Butler, of the Revere bike track. He waited 10 years for a dry summer, without ever cracking a yelp. He sure got one this year.

BROWN AND LAPHAM TRAVEL PLENTY

A. S. BROWN, JR., of the Letters, and Henry Lapham pursue their sports more miles than any other bugs. A plane hop to the Coast is just a jaunt to either. Golf is their favorite frenzy, but they don't neglect the other branches.

Johnny Evers talks more than any Boston baseball man, while Jimmy Welsh and Gorham Leverett of the Braves are tied for the silence championship.

Larry Duffy knows more sports intimately than most of the boys who make a profession of reporting. And always grabbed as much kick out of 'em as Doc Kendall.

Bill Duffy of Albemarle and Bill Raftery of Chestnut Hill are the red headest golf instructors.

Fred Hoey is far and away the best sport broadcaster in the land.

And that, friends of the typewriter, is all for today.

If you like this line of applesauce, be sure to write in to the dead letter office.

Hudkins May Get Forfeited Purse

San Francisco, Sept. 5 (INS)—Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska Wildcat, today appeared to have won the first round in his suit to get a $15,000 purse, declared forfeited by the State Athletic Commission after his fight here several months ago with Charley Belanger. The commission charged the fighters with "stalling."

The fact that the fight was not stopped by the referee led Judge Walter Harringer, before whom the case is being tried, to say:

"Show me the law whereby the commission can step in and hold up a fighter's money when the referee fails to halt the match."

DEFEAT OF BOBBY JONES AT PEBBLE BEACH OPENS GATE FOR FRANCIS

U. S. Amateur Championship Tourney at Pebble Beach

THIRD ROUND (36 Holes)

Cyril Tolley, Great Britain, vs. O. F. Willing, Oregon.
Jess Sweetzer, New York, vs. H. Chandler Egan, Oregon.
George Voigt, New York, vs. H. E. "Jimmy" Johnstone, St. Paul.
Francis Ouimet, Woodland, vs. William L. Little, San Francisco.

PEBBLE BEACH, Cal., Sept. 5—For the first time in years, Francis Ouimet, the former United States open and amateur champion, is afforded an excellent opportunity to win the United States amateur championship, the third round of which is being played today.

Since Francis Ouimet defeated Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, two of England's greatest professionals, in that famous play off for the United States open at The Country Club sixteen years ago, he has been ranked with the best golfers in this country

Francis won the national amateur title the year following his success at Brookline, but although he has been an important factor and a real threat almost every year since he came through at Manchester, Vt., he has been unable to deliver the necessary punch which would have brought the title back to Massachusetts.

NEMESIS IS OUT

Bobby Jones has been Francis Ouimet's nemesis. The Woodlander has been drawn in the same bracket of national championships with the Atlantan with such regularity that in some quarters it is suspected that he has developed a complex. But the real reason for Ouimet's failure against Bobby is that he lacks the killer instinct when opposing the Georgian. Francis and Bobby are very close friends, and while the latter is able to forget friendship during a championship match, Ouimet is of the opposite make up.

Now that Johnny Goodman has cleared the path by eliminating Bobby, Francis Ouimet looms up as one of the strongest contenders for the title. Ouimet's success or failure hinges on his physical condition for the remainder of the championship.

He is undeniably the best shot maker left in the field. Also he has had more championship experience than any of the other seven survivors of the first day's matches.

BEST HELPED HANDICAP

One condition which favors the Woodlander is that he has played far less golf this season than during any year since he won his first major title. He went through a serious operation last spring and doubt was expressed as to whether or not he would play golf this year

He wisely laid aside his clubs until almost the middle of the summer and even more wisely he has played only on rare occasions, with the result that he entered this championship in perfect condition.

Francis is playing Bill Little, who, until last Tuesday was an unknown outside of his native State. Little bears a fine reputation up around the Golden Gate district of California but even his most loyal enthusiasts did not figure he would still be going when the third round started.

Little earned his rights to the

ROSLINDALE TIES QUINCY

By DICK McSWEENEY

Quincy and Roslindale staged their second game in the series for the Twilight League championship at Fallon Field, Roslindale, and at the end of seven innings the contest was called on account of darkness with the score tied at 1-1.

Frank Millikan hurled a stellar game for the home team, allowing but four clean hits.

Roslindale gathered seven hits off Ed Mullowney but was unable to cash these bingles into runs except in the last of the third frame when Spognardi doubled, Concannon sacrificed and Powers singled to bring in one marker.

The next game in this series will be played at Fallon Field, Roslindale, tomorrow night at 5:30.

Lee Andrews or Frank Tansey will twirl for Quincy while John Shea is due to toil on the Roslindale rubber.

Lafayette Must Build Up New Eleven

Easton, Pa.—G. Herbert McCracken, coach of the Lafayette College football team, today took thirty-six men to Saylor's Lake, Saylorburg, to begin two weeks of training for the season which will open on Oct. 5.

In discussing prospects, Coach McCracken said: "It is necessary to build a new team. Our line may be fair, but the back field will give me trouble. Several of the boys who played line positions last year may be shifted to the back field to solve the problem."

B. U. STAR IS ELIGIBLE

Until all the veterans put in their appearance at Nickerson Field it will be impossible for Coaches Reggie Brown and Ed Robinson to progress very far with the development of Boston University's football ieleven.

Francis "Crab" Walke and Irving Winer, both halfbacks, were the only seasoned players to report for the initial, drill of the season.

The appearance of Walke on the scene and the announcement that he passed his courses in summer school and is accordingly eligible for the team was gratifying to the Terrier coaches who are now sure of their star punter and triple threat's services.

The remainder of the veteran gridsters should be on hand by the end of the week so that by next Monday the whole squad will be on hand to begin intensive practice.

Grid Gleanings

By International News Service

New York, N. Y.—Thirty-seven men selected by Coach Chancy Crowley will report at Baker field today for the first Columbia football practice of the year.

Backfield men are plentiful, sixteen being included in the squad. The remainder include five ends, five tackles, seven guards and four centers.

New York—Fordham's football squad will today continue its training, with passing, punting and limbering-up exercises being emphasized.

Ocean City, N. J.—Other coaches may see fit to begin football training slowly, but not Lou Little, Georgetown mentor.

For Little, despite a broiling sun, is driving his Hilltopper squad through two sessions daily—sessions involving formations, kicking, passing, signal and body contact drill.

Jackson's Hill, W. Va.—Work for the West Virginia football squad encamped here is getting more strenuous daily, with regulation scrimmage predicted for the end of this week.

Yesterday Coach Rogers lined up three different teams during the morning drill only to disband them all in the afternoon workout.

Sharkey Expects Loughran Will Be Hard to Defeat

SCHMELING WOULD HAVE BEEN EASIER FOE, SAYS HUB CONTENDER

By JACK SHARKEY
Contender for World's Heavyweight Title

TOMMY LOUGHRAN is the main obstruction in my drive for the heavyweight championship of the world. I believe that when I eliminate the Philadelphian at the Yankee Stadium on September 26 that the road to the title will be wide open.

It was originally planned to put me against Max Schmeling, the young German heavyweight, in the big match this month. Schmeling's difficulties with the New York Athletic Commission made the bout impossible this year.

Jack Sharkey

I consider Schmeling one of the most promising heavyweights to crash his way to the front in recent years, but I would not have experienced as much trouble in defeating Herr Max as I will in disposing of Loughran.

Loughran is a finished boxer, while the heavy hitting Schmeling is still a year or two away from his fistic peak. The German's boxing background consists of matches with Risko and Paulino. A heavyweight with limited experience cannot expect to function perfectly in a big test. A year or two from now the German won't have to take odds from anybody.

LOUGHRAN, on the other hand, has engaged in some 120 bouts. Most of the headliners have sidestepped him, when possible, as they know he possesses tremendous boxing ability.

I believe Schmeling is at the same stage of his development that I was at the time I fought Dempsey. I had crashed into the limelight by licking Willie, Godfrey, Maloney and McTigue.

Then I tackled Dempsey. I had natural ability, speed and a punch, but I lacked the finish in my work, which I have since gained.

I am fortunate in the fact that I am still only 26 years of age. The next four years should find me at my best.

CLARK GRIFFITH, owner of the Washington American League baseball club, told me at Tampa, Fla., last winter, that no ballplayer or boxer reached his full development and gained all of his strength until he was 28 years of age. He said the athlete would usually keep at the peak for five years and then begin to slip.

When I consider how I have become stronger and developed during the past two years I don't hesitate in agreeing with the "Old Fox."

In my winning bout with Young Stribling at Miami Beach, Fla., I was much improved in my ring technique over the form I showed in some of my earlier battles. Johnny Buckley, my manager, declared I didn't make a boxing mistake.

MY plan of battle called for me to beat Stribling down slowly. The southerner was hanging on at the finish of the tenth round. If the bout had been 15-round affair, the pride of Georgia would have been knocked out.

Since I started training for Loughran, I have been devoting a great deal of attention to my left hand attack. Tommy has quite a left duke himself. It has enabled him to win most of his fights. I think, though, that Loughran will find I am also able to do pretty well with my left hand.

Loughran will be the third former light heavyweight champion whom I have met. If I do as well against him as I did against the other two, I shall be satisfied.

I knocked out the veteran Mike McTigue in 12 rounds at the Garden, while I stopped Jack Delaney in one session.

THE McTigue bout was one of the hardest of my career. Mike had just flattened Paul Berlenbach and Jimmy Johnston had him thinking he had found the Spring of Perpetual Youth.

McTigue came roaring at me like a hungry lion in the first round. He opened up with a terrific barrage of left and right hand punches for the chin in an effort to sweep me off my feet.

For ten rounds we slugged it out. Mike then began to weaken and I won by a knockout in the twelfth round.

When the match was made, Johnny Buckley insisted that the distance be 15 rounds. He felt that it would take me ten rounds to wear down a crafty boxer like McTigue and that I would score with a knockout during the last five rounds. Johnny's dope was correct.

YOUNG STRIBLING, whom I defeated at Miami Beach, also stood high in the ranks of the light heavyweights for a time.

Perhaps I have the number of the graduates of this boxing division. I know Loughran won't admit this to be true and so I shall have to punch home my argument at the Yankee Stadium on September 26.

HAYES TWIRLS 2 VICTORIES

With Walter Hayes doing the iron man stunt for Manchester, the Blue Sox took a doubleheader from the Lewiston Twins, increasing their lead to a half a game over Lynn. This practically settles the New England League race, as there are but three more days to play.

Hayes let down the losers with six hits in the first game, while in the nightcap, Lewiston got 11 scattered bingles. He also banged out three hits himself, which is quite a day's work.

New Bedford pushed Gloucester further down in the cellar and made their third place standing firmer, by trouncing the fishermen two games.

Dewey Spaulding and Ray Seddon, New Bedford pitchers, both twirled wonderful games, the former holding Gloucester to six hits in the opener, while the latter stopped them with four bingles.

Dick Phelan, Lynn catcher, has been appointed assistant football coach of the Middlebury College football team. He has plenty of experience, having played with Holy Cross for the past three seasons, and was captain of last year's team.

Two double-headers are on the schedule for today. Lewiston goes to Nashua for their second twi hill in two days, and Gloucester travels to Lynn for two games. The other contests are Manchester at Portland and Brockton at New Bedford

Lefty Al Douglas held Portland to four hits, winning his game 3 to 1. Lynn had the game 1 to 0 until the ninth when the Mariners tied it up on McHugh's triple, but Lynn emerged the victor in their half of the same inning on Stack's long single.

Nine 'Y' Athletes in Quincy Meet

Nine Y. M. C. A. track athletes are entered in the N. E. A. A. U. track and field championships at Quincy on Sept. 8.

Meyer Kevner, holder of the National Y. M. C. A. running broad jump record of 23 feet, ¼ inch, is entered in that event and in the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes.

Francis Powers and Marchall McAnern are entered in the 220-yard high hurdles and the 220-yard low hurdles.

McAnern has been doing about 23 seconds in the low hurdles, while Powers has been doing 15 1-5 seconds in the high hurdles.

Charles Thompson, former Northeastern star, and winner of the National Y. M. C. A. 440-yard run championship, is entered in that event and in the 880-yard run.

The other Y entries are: Trasker Crosson and Norman Anderson in the 880-yard run; James Fait in the century and 220-yard dashes, and T. Kobchick in the 6-mile run.

Johnson to Remain Senator's Pilot

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

"I FIND that a great many boxing fans in Roxbury and South Boston are asking why Pat McCarthy doesn't receive some consideration from Boston matchmakers," said Mr. Boston. "There is some logic to their queries as Pat looks to be in the best condition of his career.

JACK CONWAY

"At Miami, Fla., last winter the Roxbury Adonis assisted Jack Sharkey in getting ready for his tussle with Young Stribling. He engaged in two bouts while in Florida and won each of them.

"Pat was then signed to help polish off Riccardo Bertazzolo for his engagements with Jim Maloney.

"Meanwhile McCarthy kept demanding bouts with Maloney, Schaaf and other front runners, but did not receive any recognition. Pat and Schaaf got tangled up at Braves Field a year ago. Although McCarthy took the bout on three days' notice, he gave the Fighting Viking a close tussle.

"McCarthy has always felt that if he had time in which to train that he could defeat Schaaf. There are many keen judges of boxing who share the same viewpoint.

"McCarthy has always said that he could lick Maloney and points to the fact Sharkey has never attempted to dispute his assertion in the ring.

"It would seem as though Eddie Mack or Col. Bob McKirdy should give McCarthy a hearing.

"I MET Phil Buccola at the Boston Garden. He tells me Bertazzolo will sail for Italy on Saturday afternoon on the Roma out of New York. Bertazzolo will return to this country in six weeks. By that time his left hand, which he shattered in his last meeting with Maloney, should be okay.

"This injury cost Bertazzolo a tidy sum of money. The New York Garden offered him $12,500 to meet Otto Von Porat in the semifinal to the Sharkey-Loughran mill on September 26.

"WHEN it was announced that Victorio Campolo was on the injured list, Eddie Mack tried to get Phil Scott to battle Jim Maloney here this month. Jimmy Johnston, Scott's American manager, told Mack that it was expected that the Argentine giant would be in condition to go through with his tussle with Scott on September 18 and that the Maloney tussle would have to wait until a later date.

"LARGE Dan Carroll has given his approval for a clash between Shamus and the British champion. This bout, if it takes place, will set a new record for gate receipts in Boston provided Campolo doesn't ruin Scott in their New York engagement.

"JOHNNY Buckley announces that Andy Callahan is prepared to prove that Bruce Flowers is just another fighter. In view of the controversy following the Flowers-Zeramby bout, a meeting between the New Rochelle warrior and Callahan would be a major attraction. Callahan has won 35 bouts in a row, but to date few of the headliners have shown a willingness to meet him.

"HARRY GARCH, Flowers' manager, told me that while it is probable that Bruce fouled Zeramby, that in his opinion the Lynn boxer was not greatly injured by the low blow. Garch contends that Zeramby could have resumed fighting if he had cared to do so.

"THERE is now talk of a tussle between Zeramby and Honeyboy Finnegan. This is a natural and will sell out the Garden any time that Eddie Mack decides to stage it. Mack has had some difficulty on the Finnegan end of the bout, but it looks as though all details in connection with the affair will be ironed out within a week or so."

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON,
Golf's Greatest Teacher

About the time the golfer attains the golf proficiency that puts him in the class with our advanced players—playing to or less—he begins to get badly tangled up with the mental side of golf. There are certain aspects of the game which, if the player understands and rightly interprets them, aid the golfer a lot; there are others which are sheer foolishness, usually called golf psychology. Most of the golf psychology you hear of is nothing but self-hypnotism. There are players who make up their minds that a certain hole cannot be well played by them—they call it golf psychology. This fancy name means nothing except that this player has abandoned all effort to play that hole well and—what he never suspects—the hole is badly played before he even starts to shoot it. This state of mind results from an interesting side of golf—the physical hazard. How to conquer this will be told in lessons to follow.

LANDIS VISITS RED SOX HEAD

Judge Landis made a flying visit to Boston yesterday, called at Fenway Park for an hour's chat with Bobbie Quinn and Bill Carrigan, and then left the Hub via airship bound for Louisville and the Junior league games. The visit of the commissioner had no business significance as he was merely paying a social call on the Red Sox staging a double-header at Braves Field Sunday.

No Games Here Until Saturday

Today as well as tomorrow Boston will be without a big league baseball game.

These lapses, and the Hub has seen several of them this year, have been caused principally by the efforts of the schedule makers to atone for the absence of Sunday games in both Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

The next game will be on Saturday, when the Browns come here to play five games in four days, staging a double-header at Braves Field Sunday.

200 WOMEN IN TITLE MEET

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

CLOSE to 200 girl track stars will compete in the women's New England A. A. A. U. outdoor track and field championships which will be held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the playstead at Norumbega Park.

Five New England senior championship events are carded for the meet. Besides the 100-yard dash, there will be the running high jump, which event Miss Mildred Wiley, Olympic star and champion, will not appear to defend her title. The other title events include throwing the discus, baseball throwing, and hurling the javelin.

Margaret Proctor of the Lunenburg A. C. of Lunenberg, will defend her title in the javelin throw. The committee have received a very capable list of entries in this event and the Lunenburg star will be forced the limit.

Competition in the running high jump will bring out Virginia Bismerth of the Onteora Club of Malden. Miss Bismerth is one of the young tennis stars from this section and has developed into a promising high jumper.

In the shot put, Rena MacDonald the world's record holder will compete in the 8-pound open class. Miss MacDonald will also defend her title in the discus throw.

Lillian Bleakney of Needham high school and wearing the colors of the Boston Swimming Association is the favorite in the junior shot put competition.

Woodsies Expect Hard Battle With Wanderers

BROOKLYN TEAM HERE SATURDAY

By BILL McAULEY

THE Boston pro soccer eleven will have the Brooklyn Wanderers as opponents Saturday at Huntington Field, and from the reports of their game played at Brooklyn last Sunday there ought to be some fireworks.

The locals upset the dope at Brooklyn by not only defeating the Wanderers, but also shutting them out.

It is reported that it was a regular battle, in which no quarter was given.

Irrespective of whether there is scrapping or not the fans will witness a gruelling contest, for these two clever elevens when they clash at Brookline Saturday with the Hub eleven favored to emerge victorious.

On Sunday the Hub eleven will be at New York, where they clash with the Nationals and if they bag a majority of the points from this pair they will be doing well.

Tonight Fall River clashes with the Hakoah eleven at Tiverton, starting time being scheduled for 7 p. m. Owner Sam Marks of the Spindle City eleven has had the flood lights installed at the Stadium for the match and if it is a success a mid-week game will be played regularly.

The amateurs get away Saturday, the Boston and District League having several games scheduled which will be pleasing news to followers of the simon pures.

A couple of new teams will be seen in the old league this season, Stoughton and Lusitania A team being the newcomers.

Two former members have been readmitted in Clan McGregor and Boston Celtics and with most of last year's elevens back again the season should furnish the fans with good soccer.

QUIMET HAS TITLE CHANCE

quarter finals by defeating Phillips Finlay, the conqueror of Ouimet at Bras Burn, and Johnny Goodman, who furnished the greatest upset in present day championships by taking Bobby Jones "for a ride."

Ouimet came through against Dave Martin, a great golfer who is ranked with the best in this State in the first round and then defeated Clarence Hubby, the lone Texas qualifier.

Cyril Tolley, the amateur champion of England, is playing Dr. O. F. Willing, who went to the semi-finals last season, and this should be a fine battle with the odds slightly favoring the British.

The Sweetser-Egan match brings together two former national amateur champions. Sweetser lead the field at The Country Club in Brookline in 1921, while H. Chandler Egan was the title holder in 1910 and 1911.

George Voigt, a product of the public links of Washington, D. C., but now located in the Metropolitan district, is out with Harrison, "Jimmy" Johnstone, of St. Paul, one of the best known players in this country.

On paper it would seem that Cyril Tolley, present British champion and Jess Sweetser, the only American to ever bring back the English amateur title would meet in the upper half in the semi finals and George Voigt and Francis Ouimet in the lower bracket.

A Sweetser-Ouimet finals would, from an Eastern viewpoint, be most ideal.

Fights Last Night

By International News Service

At Kingston, Jamaica—Raymond Junior lightweight, knocked out Eddie Cassandra. Martin, former boxing weight champion, in seventh round (10).

At Providence, R. I.—Sweetser, heavyweight, won from Johnny Risko, Cleveland, on a foul in ninth round (11).

At Winnipeg, Man.—Randolfo Dias, 117, won eight-round decision from Eddy Para, 115, in eight rounds.

At Oakland, Cal.—Everett Strong, Omaha middleweight, defeated Frankie Denny, Oakland (10).

At San Francisco—Wesley Ketchell, Portland, Ore., middleweight, knocked out Gilbert Attell, San Francisco.

Many changes have been made in the Commonwealth course since the open tournament players gathered there last season. The two new holes, Nos. 2 and 3 will be played for the first time in open competition, as will the new 14th, which is a real golf hole.

Like Johnny Dawson, the Omaha player is connected with a sporting goods house and he was threatened with disbarment. Other than for the fact that Goodman was not as well known nationally as Dawson, there is a veil of mystery surrounding the dastardly which barred Dawson and allowed Goodman to compete.

However, it is a safe bet right now that the U. S. G. A. wished it had gambled on Dawson and refused Goodman's entry.

The eliminated of Bobby Jones, golfs greatest box office attraction, will have the same effect on the gallery as the announcement that Babe Ruth is out of the Yankee lineup. The bottom of the championship from a financial viewpoint went out with Bobby Jones and the coffers of the U. S. G. A. must suffer.

Although any player capable of qualifying in a national championship cannot be termed a "pushover," Bobby Jones has met some of the softest during the first day of match play. And, now that the plane have misfired, it is quite probable that there will be no more 18-hole rounds for U. S. amateur championships. One round of match play is too much of a financial risk and as the gate is of even greater importance than the winning of the title, it is poor business to send Bobby Jones out in 18-hole matches.

Evidently his success against Jones was too much of a burden of joy for Johnny Goodman for he went out of the championship in the second round, losing to Bill Little, who had taken Phillips Finlay into camp in the morning.

The Commonwealth Country Club two day open handicap medal play tournament started today. The field will be divided into four classes as was the procedure last year, when Tommy Welch of Scarboro shot a 37—35—72 to win the first gross.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

TWO years ago the United States Golf Association had George Voigt on the carpet just before the opening of the national amateur championship at Minnekadha, with the result that this player was so upset that he failed miserably. They gave Johnny Goodman the "business" at Pebble Beach, but the Nebraskan, instead of cracking, busted up the championship by sending Bobby Jones to the showers after the first round.

Judge Ralph W. Reeve has been shooting Tedesco in the middle 70's recently, but he misplaced his putting touch yesterday and turned in one of the poorest he has shot in weeks. He and his partner, Charlie Sprague, will be back in action today, and hope to show a decided improvement.

Pres. George Capen is going over his Blue Hill Country Club course with a fine tooth comb, getting everything ship shape for the annual open next week. As great enjoyment is derived from a round at Blue Hill, there will be a record breaking field out in Canton next week.

Ray Ouimet, professional at Commonwealth, is an outspoken young man. He claims that professionals ruin many youngsters by attempting to improve on natural form. According to Ray, "Keep the professionals away from the boys with natural form, if you want them to get anywhere in the game."

Sox Recall Four From Pittsfield

Pittsfield, Sept. 5—The Red Sox have recalled five players who were sent to Pittsfield on option.

They are Pat Simmons, Horace Lisenbee and Ed Durham, pitchers, and Bob and Eddie Connolly, catchers.

Lisenbee hurt his leg in an accident at Springfield several days ago and will not pitch again this season. The other four will remain with the Hillies until the close of the Eastern League campaign, September 15.

Durham pitched a no-hit no-run game against Albany, Sunday, his third shutout in his last four starts.

N. Y. U. GRIDMEN BEGIN WORK

New York, Sept. 5—The task of moulding a machine at New York University for the first game at Ohio field on September 28 with Vermont is causing Chick Meehan much worry.

The material at University Heights is all of about the same caliber and has no outstanding stars such as Ken Strong, Ed Hill, Bob Barrabee and Al Lasaman of the 1928 Violet grid outfit.

The N. Y. U. gridiron aspirants reported to training camp at Farmingdale, and they will spend three weeks in intensive training for the stiff 10-game schedule.

During this period at Farmingdale Coach Chick Meehan will endeavor to develop capable substitutes to fill the holes left by the 16 letter men lost last June.

Indications are now that the reenforcements will be found in the men who made up last year's crack freshman team, as well as from the older utility men remaining from the 1928 varsity squad.

FINAL RACE AT REVERE SATURDAY

AL LETOURNIER, starring his final drive for the American motor paced championship and right now riding at his best form, is a favorite with many to win the Harvest Cup hour race at the Revere Cycle Track Saturday night. The race will be the final of the year at the beach oval.

Letournier at present is a lone point behind the present titlet, Franco Georgetti. If the Frenchman should win the next championship event he will pass the Italian in the standing.

Opposing Letournier this weekend will be George Chapman, Larry Gaffney, Francesco Escobetti, Franz Duelberg. Charlie Winters and Victor Rausch, the youthful Germans.

Duelberg should be near the top Saturday. He has won three of the last four contests at Revere, and would have won the fourth if he had not taken a bad spill.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

MANY persons snore and especially when they are tired. Most any kind of a sound, even a soft whistle, will make the snorer turn sufficiently to stop the snoring. In stubborn cases pulling the bedclothes helps. A clothespin applied to the offender's nose is a little too strenuous to be advisable.

RIGHT ANGLE OF TRIANGLE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Authority on Love Problems Advises Anxious Wife

HOW to find the right way out of a love triangle is not always as easy as it sounds. For to the person blinded by infatuation, the triangle seems a very puzzling maze on which it is difficult, if not impossible, to get the right angle or true perspective.

Mrs. K is trying hard to find the right way out of a love triangle into which she has wandered.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," she writes. "Will you advise me please?

"When quite young, I was married. Since then my life has been monotonous. There has been no companionship between my husband and myself. We have no children.

"My husband gives me his money and turns me loose, his duty done. For a while, although I felt lonely and neglected, I was not unhappy, for I had numerous friends. Among these was a splendid fellow whom I soon realized I loved as I never had loved my husband. He was such a real man. Oh, I fell for him hard!

"Being afraid to continue the friendship, for fear of revealing my love for him, I took the only course that seemed right. I could not leave a husband who had been good to me in his way. Neither could I allow an association with the other man, which could come to no good and would be an unfair reflection on his character. So I treated him rather coldly, avoiding him whenever possible, allowing a beautiful friendship to terminate.

"This was so hard to do. There were times when I thought he cared. It took all my strength to head in the right direction. It has been so long since then, but the old heart still hurts and hurts. And though I go with my friends as usual, there is a great emptiness in everything, and I'm tired of carrying on and pretending happiness.

"That's all—I thank you for your interest. MRS. K."

You did a very difficult and very wise thing, Mrs. K., when you terminated your friendship with the other man. I agree with you that this friendship, which was growing into infatuation, on your side at least, could "come to no good" and was unfair to all concerned.

I am sorry that as time goes on, you are still feeling lonely and unhappy. May I make one or two suggestions which may, I hope, ease your heartache, if not at once, then surely in the course of the weeks and months.

Your life should not be empty. Your husband is good to you "in his way." Ask his permission to adopt a baby. Take it while it is so small that you and he will always be dad and mother in its thought. Give it all the love you would have lavished on one of your own. You will be surprised to see how it fills your days and heart.

Moreover, those baby wiles and smiles may prove a mutual bond between your husband and yourself, which will lure him to spend more of his time, thought and devotion on you and his home.

Do you try to win him? Not to love, of course, if that bond seems lacking between you, but cultivate a fine friendship. Even the most successful and romantic marriage depends finally for its happiness on friendship and affection.

Think your husband, not with hardness or bitterness, but tolerantly, graciously, and, if you can, tenderly. Bring to the best in him, make yourself as attractive, his home as comfortable, restful and stimulating as you can.

If you still have time left over, take up a hobby, an enthusiasm—be it the study of the piano, harp or ukelele, solo dancing, gardening or art. Choose something that will lead you out of yourself, make you less self-centered.

The time to ponder well whether a marriage is going to be congenial is before undertaking it and its responsibilities. And that is the time the average girl does the least thinking on the subject.

Now that your marriage is an established fact, my dear, fill your life with enthusiasm for making it, as far as may be, happy, bright and successful.

Correct in Manners

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Mrs. Beeckman will be pleased to answer queries from readers on problems of etiquette.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Some time ago I received a wedding announcement two weeks before the wedding. Was this correct, or should the announcement be sent out the day of the wedding?

2. Is it proper for the bride to give the groom a gift? If so, have you any suggestions to offer?

3. In sitting in the rear seat of a car, on which side should the girl sit? READER.

Wedding announcements should be sent out after the ceremony has been performed, when there is something to announce. Usually the announcements are all ready and are mailed directly after the ceremony, while the happy living in the same city receive them the day following the wedding.

2. Yes. I have listed this kind of present (and also the appropriate presents for the bride to give her attendants and those that the groom may appropriately give to his attendants) in pamphlet form. Will you please be so kind as to send me an addressed envelope so that I may mail these to you?

3. The lady on the right of the gentleman" is the rule here.

D

I am intending to be married secretly this summer and I do not wish to announce it until this fall. Would it be proper for me to send formal announcements at the time I intend to make the marriage known, probably three or four months later, with the date of the original wedding on them?

H. H

It is not considered good form to make an announcement so long after the marriage has taken place. For such an unconventional plan as yours I have it—better to tell the friends who live near and write notes to those who live far away.

PARIS BUREAU, BOSTON AMERICAN

PARIS, Sept. 5—Some very interesting frocks, each with its own small jacket, are now being worn at the various holiday resorts of France.

These little coats are another echo from the past that has this season yielded so much inspiration to the designers here, who revel in the contrast afforded by old-time touches in a setting of ultra modernity.

Sketched for you today is a very new little dress of midnight blue chiffon used for afternoon. The bodice, which is novel in cut, is shirred into vertical bands at the sides and center of front and back and has a shirred decolletage ending in a knotted scarf at the back. Four circular flounces form the graceful skirt.

Know When to Speak

By LUCY LOWELL

THE gift of expression is a marvel past all comprehension. To be able to speak clearly and convincingly with restraint that indicates grasp of the subject, whatever this may be, and with the eloquence which moves to tears or laughter, is an attribute of genius, no less. By it men have scaled the heights.

To know when to speak is a more wonderful attainment, however. The right speech at the wrong time has plunged many a man and woman into misery. And this second attribute of greatness may be cultivated. Not everyone can sway others with words, but everyone can learn to think before he utters such words as he has to say, thus acquiring that tack which makes impossible speech when the time for it is not right.

But more marvelous than either of these is knowing when to keep silence. A golden thing, this understanding, and one which wields influence never reached by the most inspired words, the most carefully chosen moment for expressing them.

"I think," said Cato, "the first virtue is to restrain the tongue; he approaches nearest to the gods who knows how to be silent even though he is in the right."

Even though he is in the right—surely a godlike quality, to be able not to force a point with full knowledge of fact to back it up.

"The tongue is a little member," we read in the epistle of St. James, "and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindeth!

"And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity. . . . The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison."

Yet that which cannot be tamed may be curbed; even the tongue is subject to the will to silence.

A KISS FOR CORINNA

By May Christie

CHAPTER 9

Denise pursed up her lips, but did not answer.

"All this drinking among you young women is disgusting," proceeded Mr. Criswell.

After the meal was over Denise followed her uncle into his study. He was quite a dear at heart, she knew, and now she fussed about him. She sat at his feet in little girl fashion.

"You certainly were rather down on the young fellows I go around with, but you can't entirely blame me, since you don't invite the other kind—the worth-while ones—to come to the house. There must be a lot of charming young men on the Street who would make fascinating friends, I'm sure. For instance—she fiddled with the tassel of his smoking jacket, "isn't there a young chap in your office, name of Malvey Craig?"

Mr. Criswell looked taken aback. He took a sip of his coffee before he said: "Yes. A promising lad. He's one of our floor telephone clerks. Have you introduced him myself? Have you met him, Denise?"

She smiled enchantingly, looking for the moment rather like a shy child.

"He lost his way coming here the other morning and I happened on to meet him on the roads. I directed him. We'd quite a chat. He seemed out of the ordinary. With lots of ideas. Very interesting."

"He's a clever boy. Ambitious, honest and clean-cut. If only Mortimer—"—his father sighed—"had one-quarter his keenness and common sense and working capacity, I'd be thankful."

Denise's heart accelerated at these words of praise for Malvey.

A little breathlessly she said: "If he is such a paragon, Uncle, and you think he would be a good influence for Mortimer, why don't you invite him down for a week-end, or for dinner one evening? I confess I'm sick and tired of the men I meet, and—"—tentatively and naively—"it we could have a few parties with interesting people here, we wouldn't be running around so much in the evenings."

At this psychological moment, Mortimer, still oppressed by his "hang-over," came blundering into the room. The penetrating eyes of Mr. Criswell were turned on his son. The dissipated look of the young men were not lost on him. He suggested, brusquely: "Mortimer, suppose you ask young Craig out here one evening?"

Mortimer's black mouth gaped.

"That chap from the office? What on earth for?"

"He's interesting and clever," said Denise.

"Ha! Ha! Sweet on him are you?" mocked her cousin. "But nothing doing! The fellow's already got a wonderful girl."

Denise Van Wyck—a wraith of summer ermine covering her white evening frock—awaited Van Tuyl's arrival at the side entrance of the mansion.

That was furthest from the library. After her uncle's recent scathing observations on her idle lawlessness, and his expressed wish—be that she would cease running around in their company, it behooved her to be as quiet tonight as possible.

Because she wanted him to invite Malvey Craig down here, she must not be found out in anything that would further antagonize her uncle. She hoped with all her heart that Van Tuyl wouldn't honk that terrible hooter . . .

He didn't. In his machine he slid silently up under the shadow of the house and stopped close to her.

"That you, sweetheart?" He enjoyed intrigue. "You look forlorn. Like Cinderella after the ball."

As she got quickly in beside him and the car glided out into the road, she said, nippily: "I'd have you know that this rag of a coat cost a mere couple of thousand dollars, so if you're going to play the fairy prince to this little Cinderella—as you call me—you'd better get a move on, or you haven't got a hope in Hades!"

He looked down at her blonde prettiness, snuggled low in the machine beside him. What was she getting at. Girls—even wealthy ones—were all gold-diggers. They expected full cream whips for every liberty accorded . . . . indeed, were just as predatory and—in the money sense—as cold-blooded as the little Broadwayites and chorus girls whose company he frequented.

"The old man's getting a bit tight on the exchequer, otherwise you know I'd give you the world and everything therein contained, Denise." He flung his right arm around her and gave her a hard squeeze.

She was annoyed. She felt she couldn't bear his touch.

"This particular Cinderella doesn't want anything from you, thanks!" There was a resentful flare at her nostrils, a curl to her soft lips. "I'm not one of your gold-digging women, Van Tuyl the lord!" and she moved definitely away from him with a wiggle of her hips.

He felt a little piqued. In his somewhat slow mental processes he had classified Denise as a "hot baby."

They proceeded swiftly along the roads in total silence. It was nearly 11 o'clock when they pulled up at the Anchor Inn, that well-known roadhouse.

Already there were cars parked all about the place, with couples sailing to and fro, drinking and giggling. Tuyl went to the rear of his car and took out a couple of bottles.

They went inside.

Couples danced hilariously—or insipidly—or passionately—according to their caliber. Denise saw one lovely girl she knew—no older than I—with an ephemeral frock torn almost off one shoulder. Thus early in the evening, her eyes had a glazed stare and she did not even recognize the new arrival.

BRIDGE LUNCHEONS

IT'S surprising, isn't it, how many bridge players have survived the warm weather with all their enthusiasm intact? And with the card table comes our never-failing problem of what to serve for the bridge supper.

The recipes that I have for you today are appropriate, either for service after the game or for Sunday night suppers.

PINEAPPLE DELIGHT

1 can pineapple, the slices are preferable.
1 cup pearl tapioca.
Juice of 1 lemon.

Place the tapioca in salted boiling water seasoned with lemon juice and boil until it is like jelly. Add the pineapple cut into small pieces. Run into an oblong border mold. When ready to serve fill the center of the mold with whipped cream in which chopped angelica and pecan nuts have been placed. Garnish with maraschino cherries and angelica to resemble flowers.

This recipe is capable of endless variations. Different fruits may be used according to season and to taste for filling the center or mixing with tapioca.

HOT BAKING POWDER BISCUITS

3 cups bread flour.
5 tsps. baking powder.
1 tsp. salt.
1 tbsp. sugar.
4 tbsps. butter.
1 cup milk and water in equal parts.

Mix dry ingredients and sift twice. Work in butter with tips of fingers; add gradually the liquid, mixing with knife to a soft dough. It is impossible to determine the exact amount of liquid owing to differences in flour. Toss on a floured board, pat and roll lightly ½ inch in thickness. Shape with a biscuit-cutter. Place on buttered pan and bake in hot oven 12 to 15 minutes.

ICED COFFEE

2 qts. very strong coffee.
½ pt. cr. cream.
½ pt. of whipped cream.

Fill tall glasses with cracked ice. Pour ¾ full with boiling coffee. Add more ice. Add 2 tbsps. of cream. Sweeten to taste (2 tsps. of powdered sugar), stir till sugar dissolves. Add more ice and a pinch of cinnamon if desired. Serve with whipped cream on top.

Hints. The coffee must be very strong, because of the melting quality of ice. Use cream de menthe instead of creme de menthe if you prefer. It is delicious with coffee.

COCOANUT LAYER CAKE

2 cups sifted cake flour.
3 tsps. baking powder.
½ tsp. salt.
2-3 cup butter or other shortening.
1 cup sugar.
3 egg yolks, well beaten.
1-3 cup milk.
1 tsp. vanilla.
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten.
1 can cocoanut, Southern style (1½ cups).

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift 3 times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, creaming well after each addition. Add egg yolks; then flour and milk alternately, a small amount at a time. Mix thoroughly after each addition. Add vanilla and fold in egg whites. Bake in 2 greased 9-inch layer pans for 25 to 30 minutes in moderate oven (375° F.). Double recipe for 3 10-inch layers.

Spread Seven Minute Frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake. Sprinkle each layer with coating of cake with cocoanut while frosting is still soft.

TOMATOES STUFFED WITH CORN AND WELSH CHEESE FONDUE

Select large ripe tomatoes. Scoop out the centers. (Don't throw the centers away, they will be delicious tomorrow morning scrambled in your eggs.) Sprinkle with salt and pepper and fill with a mixture of corn mixed with cream sauce. Bake in the oven until tender, but not brown. Make a fondu of Gruyere or American cheese. When cooked, pour around the tomatoes which are cooked and waiting on the plate.

CHEESE FONDU

Weigh as many eggs as you have guests. Take 1-3 their weight of Gruyere cheese and 1-6 of their weight of butter. Heat the eggs well in a saucepan; add the cheese, grated, and the butter. Put the saucepan on the fire and stir until the mixture is soft and creamy, then add salt, more or less, according to the age of the cheese, and a generous amount of pepper, which is one of the positive characters of this dish. Serve on a hot plate.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

SLEEPING GARMENTS

Childhood sleep is pleasant and unbothered by any mental worries. In his dreams the child is master of all, and each of his day dreams becomes a reality.

To be happy he must be comfortable.

I have searched the market thoroughly and found the pajamas I'm illustrating today to be the most perfect garment obtainable.

Style No. 8159 is suitable for little sister, too. It is designed in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years.

The most interesting thing about it is the small amount of material it takes. Why, in the eight-year size, 2¼ yards of 36-inch is sufficient.

The neckline has a Peter Pan collar to carry out tailored idea, but for little girls the preference ordinarily is for a round neck. Note in the small view the neckline finished with a piped band which extends down front of garment. The pattern also provides for short sleeves.

It is a splendid time to start right now to make several suits for cold wintry nights. Choose light weight flannel which comes in such pretty floral patterns for sister and gay stripes for brother.

Pattern price 15c stamps or coin (wrapped carefully). Enclose 15c additional if you wish a copy of our latest book of Fifth Avenue Fashions. All our styles are created in Paris or New York. Every pattern contains full directions. Very easy to use and guaranteed to fit perfectly.

BETTER THINK BEFORE YOU ACT

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M. D., Ph. D.

THE world is ready and willing —nay eager—to give golden prizes to the man or woman who thinks!

Not ordinary thinking, mind you, but exceptional thinking, the kind that leads to superlative results.

It is strange how little attention is paid by the average man to the mind. Why not study psychology, for instance, the same as one studies arithmetic or penmanship? Is it not the mind that in one way or another controls the body? Is it not the mind that invariably is the dominant force in fashioning success? Is it not the mind that makes us experience happiness and contentment, or depression and misery? Is it not the mind by means of which we come into contact with other people and things?

In short, it's mind—first, last and always! Therefore, train your mind to the highest pitch of efficiency! Study your mind. Analyze it. Use it to the utmost. A mind without action is not a very effective organ.

We think, we imagine, we plan, we conjure up ideas. Then we put them into execution—we act! Thought and action, therefore, are intimately related. In many ways they are inseparable.

To act practically without thought is as unwise as thinking without sooner or later putting the thoughts into active use. Nevertheless, thousands of people act impulsively, without recourse to thought.

If always we would stop to think before we act, how many scores of mistakes would be saved!

To think first, before one puts thought into execution, does not imply craftiness or design. But it implies common horse sense, and that's a lot!

The habit of always thinking first should prove especially valuable to persons of nervous temper, to nervous, excitable people, and to those who hold it almost to be a virtue always to say what they think. Many feelings are hurt, friends lost, misunderstandings brought to life because one lets the tongue run away with the head. Jobs are lost, friendships broken, marriage ties severed for no other reason.

WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

MOST of the time, a normal man doesn't know nor care how the household machinery is running. Just so long as his meals are on time, and he can find his things, he is content to let the women do the worrying.

Then, all of a sudden, after he has lain awake for half an hour from eating too much green corn, he wakes up some morning with the reform spirit burning in him, and the brilliant idea of revolutionizing the little world that revolves around him.

Lives there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself hath said, "What this house needs is SYSTEM! Management, method, efficiency. That's what!"

It happens every now and then —like epileptic spells.

Your prophetic soul gets the spirit message, when you suddenly find him tiptoeing around the pantry, snooping in the ice-box or opening the bread tin. "I'll know what is going to happen, after that!

You know that for days, until the spell passes, your sweet home life will be nothing but a police system, and that you will be watched like the keeper of a speakeasy. The "curse" has come upon you!

He will sneak upon the cook and catch her throwing out beetlights, looking for cobwebs, and showing you "how to DO things."

He will find flaws in the plumbing, lint on the napkins, smudges on the windows, holes in the screens, rust on the knives, and shells in the scrambled eggs.

He will sneak up on the cook and catch her throwing out beetstops or watermelon rind—and reproachfully tell you all the things they might have been used for.

He will discover a defunct tomato and a few withered lettuce leaves behind the ice, and spend half an hour patiently explaining what a "delicious salad" a thrifty wife might have made of them.

He will enliven the dinner table by reading aloud all the cooking recipes and domestic hints in the woman's column of the morning newspaper.

He will tell you how to induce the cook to get up a half hour too early—instead of the usual hour too late; how to make the laundress stop burning the ironing board; how to get ten hours' work out of a nine-hour charwoman—and how to get ALL your housework done in half an hour—and thus have the rest of the day for manicuring your fingernails. Isn't it WONDERFUL!

And, of course you COULD breeze into his office, some day, and tell him how to make one stenographer do the work of two, by cutting out her holidays and lunch hour; and how to make the chief clerk dust the desks and empty the waste baskets; and how to make the charwoman do the filing and the janitor keep the books—just as a favor. Oh yes, you could! But, try-an'-DO-it! EVERYBODY can be an "efficiency expert" at somebody else's job.

"LITTLE CAESAR"

The Thrilling, Vivid STORY OF A RACKETEER

by W. R. BURNETT

Vettori Tells Rico That He's Had His Last Job

What Has Happened Before

In the back room of his "Club Palermo," Chicago gangland headquarters, Sam Vettori, gangster chief, outlines the plan for a hold-up of the Casa Alvarado, high-class night club. Tony Passa, Otero the Greek, Joe Massara, and Rico, Sam's lieutenant, are each assigned parts to carry out. Sam, who does not actively participate, warns Rico there is to be no shooting. Scabby, the informer, tells Sam all is set but warns against cunning. Later, with Tony at the wheel, Rico and Otero leave for the holdup. They stroll into the club, Tony begging Rico to avoid "gun-work." Joe was the "inside man." Just as the cash drawer and safe are emptied, a man reaches for his pocket. Rico fires. "Good God!" cries Joe, "It's Courtney, the bull." The gang makes a getaway.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER 6

WHEN they came in Vettori was standing in the middle of the room mopping his forehead with his big white silk handkerchief. Beads of sweat stood out all over his swarthy, fat face.

Rico threw the sacks on the table and began to empty his pockets.

"Well," said Vettori.

"There's the dough," said Rico, "look's like a good haul."

Joe sat down at the table under the green-shaded lamp without taking off his hat or coat. Otero took the riot gun from under his coat and locked it up in a cupboard. Vettori knew there was something the matter. His eyes narrowed.

"Well," he said again.

"Everything was O. K.," said Rico, "only I had to plug a guy."

Vettori fell down into a chair and stared out the window.

"Yeah," said Joe, trying to smile, "and the guy was Courtney."

Vettori put his head on the back of his chair and stared at the ceiling. Then he sat up suddenly and leaned on the table with both fists.

"Damn!" he cried, "what did I tell you, Rico! What did I tell you! Love of God, didn't I tell you no gunwork?"

Rico was white with rage.

"Listen, Sam, you think I'm gonna let a guy pull a gat on me. What the hell! Any more of them crooks and this is my last job."

Vettori made an elaborate, tragic gesture.

"Yeah, you bet this is your last job."

Joe took off his derby and put it beside him on the table. His face was dead white.

"You said it," said Joe, "they'll get us sure for this."

Vettori shook his big head slowly from side to side.

"They'll get us dead sure for this."

Rico began to comb his hair.

"Maybe you better go over and give yourself up," he said; then dropping his sarcastic tone, "listen, how the hell they gonna get us? Why, you're the finest bunch of yellow rats I ever seen."

"Not me," said Otero.

Joe tried to smile.

"Wait till you see the papers."

Rico came over and leaned on the table.

"Listen, don't they always play that stuff up in the papers. Courtney's the only guy in the place that ever seen three of us before. Come on, snap out of it. And split the dough."

But Vettori sat inert, mopping his face. Suddenly he asked:

"Where's Tony?"

"He's dicking the car," said Rico. "Suppose they pick him up?"

Rico began to open the sacks.

"That'll be just too bad," said Joe.

Rico laughed.

"A fine bunch of yeggs!"

Vettori got to his feet in a fury.

"You, Rico! Shut your mouth. You think I want to hang because you get yellow and shoot somebody?"

Rico, very calm, put his hand in his pocket and said:

"Sam, you get funny with me and you won't get no split at all. Only a horseshoe wreath."

"Oh, hell, Sam," said Joe, "we're all in it, ain't we? Come on, split the dough."

Vettori sat down. Otero stood a little behind him, watching.

"Since you want it, Sam," said Rico, his face pale and drawn, "you're gonna get it. Listen, you split even, that's all. Hear me! You get an even split."

Vettori said nothing. Joe sat rigid, ready to dive under the table. For months Scabby had been predicting this break; now it had come. Joe feared Vettori and Rico equally, but something told him that Rico would win.

Vettori let his hands fall on the table.

"All right, Rico," he said, "I split even. Sit down and we'll divvy."

But Rico didn't move.

"You got a gun on you, Sam?" he asked.

Vettori looked up at him.

"Sure I got a gun on me."

"Well, don't try to use it."

"No," said Otero, "don't try to use it."

Vettori's face went slack. He sat tapping on the table with his fat fingers.

"Rico," he said, finally, "I split even on the square."

Rico's victory was complete. Joe looked at him with admiration. Sam was a tough bird, but Rico was tougher.

Vettori put up, walked across the room and stood looking out the window.

Joe handed Rico a sheet of paper full of figures. Rico read: $331.75.

"All right," said Rico, "split it five ways and we'll make up Scabby's split between us."

Otero sat with his chair tipped back against the wall, smoking a cigarette with his eyes closed. Vettori was playing solitaire and swearing softly to himself.

Joe looked at his watch.

"Quarter till. I got to beat it. Say, Sam, call Carilio and let him get me a cab, will you?"

Sam heaved himself to his feet and called Carilio. In a moment the bouncer put his flattened face in the door.

"Three dicks downstairs, boss?" "Who are they?" asked Vettori.

"Flaherty and two guys I don't know, boss. They want to see you."

Vettori stood looking at the floor. Carilio jumped in and shut the door.

"Hell," he said, "they're coming up."

Rico leapt to his feet, ran across the room and opened a panel in the wall.

"Come on, Joe," he said "you can slip out the back way. Stay where you are, Otero, and go right on smoking. Send Joe's cab around in the alley, Sam."

"You suppose they know something, Rico?"

"Not unless they picked Tony up. You don't know nothing, Sam, see? I'll be right here listening, and if there's any trouble, why, it'll be two only on state occasions."

Vettori scooped up the money, wrapped his coat around it, and handed it to Rico. Joe went through the panel, followed by Rico. There was a knock at the door.

Vettori rolled and Carilio opened the door. Two plain-clothes men stepped in and stood looking around the room. One was tall and burly in a huge ulster; the other was short and very young. They both had their right hands in their overcoat pockets.

"All right, Carilio," said Vettori, "go ahead. That's all."

"Wait a minute," said the burly one. "tell Flaherty we'll be down in a couple of minutes, for him to wait."

"Sure, sure," said Carilio.

He went out, closing the door softly.

"Well," said "ettori, "what you want to see me?"

"Yeah," said the burly one, who did all the talking, "we want to see you, Vettori."

"Well, here I am!"

Otero opened his eyes long enough to look at them, then closed them again and went on smoking.

"Vettori," said the detective, "we want some information."

"Well?"

CHAPTER 7.

Vettori sat down at the table and began to shuffle the cards.

"There's a big Cadillac draped around a pole a couple of blocks down the street, and we've been wondering if you knew anything about it."

Vettori began to lay out a game of solitaire.

"How should I know anything about it? Ain't it got no license plates on it?"

"Sure, but they're phoney."

"Yeah?"

"Yeah. It was stolen about 8 o'clock tonight on the North Side and we got a pretty good description, so the guy that stole it—"

"Well," said Vettori, "I got a good business. What the hell'd I be doing stealing automobiles."

He laughed and shook his head.

"Oh, you got me wrong," said the detective with elaborate innocence. "You see, it's piled up right straight down the street from here and I thought maybe it was some of the guys from your joint, see? I mean some of the young guys that come here to dance."

"Well," said Vettori, "how would I know?"

The detective took out a cigar and began to chew on it.

"Yeah," said the detective, "one guy. Bye the bye, you don't know nothing about it," said Vettori.

"Well, no harm in asking," said the detective. "Come on, Mike, let's get going. I guess Vettori don't know nothing about it."

The two of them walked slowly to the door. The big one turned.

"Say, Vettori," he said, "did you hear the news?"

Vettori looked up.

"What news?"

"Why, some rat bumped Cap Courtney off over at the Casa Alvarado."

"Yeah?" said Vettori, "some guys are sure careles with the lead. That's a tough break."

The young detective opened the door and they started out.

"Ain't it?" said the big one. "Well, so long."

As soon as the door closed, Vettori went over and shot the bolt, then peeped out through the shutter. Rico came out of his hiding place.

Sam pleased herself another glass of wine, then she reached over and touched Rico with her stick.

"Look, Rico, you ain't got a nice little girl who wants a big diamond ring, have you?"

"Me, buy a diamond ring for a skirt?"

"You are cold, Rico. Don't like wine. Don't like women. You are no good, Rico."

Rico smiled.

"Me, I like women once in a while, but I ain't putting out no diamond rings."

Leaving Ma Magdalena's Rico went in the direction of Sixty Pete's. The wind was blowing hard and Rico, turning up his overcoat collar, leaned against it. It was after three o'clock and the streets were empty. Southward the lights of the Loop made a reddish glow in the sky.

At Sicily Pete's the mechanical piano was playing. Three men were sitting at a front table. They were drunk. They layed with their food, spilled their coffee, and banged on the plates with their knives. Pete stood behind the counter, scowling.

When Rico came in he said:

"Hello, my friend, where have you been keeping yourself?"

"I haven't been around lately. Got some noisy birds, ain't you?"

Pete shrugged his shoulders.

"Yes, the fools. They drink gin."

Rico took out his cigarettes and offered Pete one. They stood smoking. One of the girls looked over, Rico smiled.

"Get an eyeful of that skirt, Pete."

"Yes, yes," said Pete, "that's all I get, an eyeful. Every night I stand here while other people have a good time."

The girl looked up at Rico and he winked at her. She said to one of the men:

"Look at that smarty over there. He thinks he's cute."

The man looked foggily at Rico, Pete put his hand on Rico's arm.

"My friend, don't start no trouble, please. That's all we have around here, trouble."

Rico turned his back on the girl.

"O. K." he said.

While Pete was getting Rico a cup of coffee, a newsboy came in:

"EXTRA! EXTRA! All about the big hold-up."

Rico bought a paper and glanced at the headlines:

THUGS KILL CAPTAIN COURTNEY IN CASA ALVARADO HOLD-UP

Rico showed Pete the paper.

"Another killing," he said.

"Yes," said Pete, "kill, kill, that's all they do."

One of the men bought a paper and started to read the account of the hold-up aloud. All the people round the bar got up and began to listen. Rico sipped his coffee and watch them.

He went out, closing the door softly.

"Well," said "ettori, "what you want to see me?"

"Yeah," said the burly one, who did all the talking, "we want to see you, Vettori."

"Well, here I am!"

Otero opened his eyes long enough to look at them, then closed them again and went on smoking.

"Vettori," said the detective, "we want some information."

"Well?"

CHAPTER 7.

Vettori sat down at the table and began to shuffle the cards.

"There's a big Cadillac draped around a pole a couple of blocks down the street, and we've been wondering if you knew anything about it."

Vettori began to lay out a game of solitaire.

"How should I know anything about it? Ain't it got no license plates on it?"

"Sure, but they're phoney."

"Yeah?"

"Yeah. It was stolen about 8 o'clock tonight on the North Side and we got a pretty good description, so the guy that stole it—"

"Well," said Vettori, "I got a good business. What the hell'd I be doing stealing automobiles."

He laughed and shook his head.

"Oh, you got me wrong," said the detective with elaborate innocence. "You see, it's piled up right straight down the street from here and I thought maybe it was some of the guys from your joint, see? I mean some of the young guys that come here to dance."

"Well," said Vettori, "how would I know?"

The detective took out a cigar and began to chew on it.

"Yeah," said the detective, "one guy. Bye the bye, you don't know nothing about it," said Vettori.

"Well, no harm in asking," said the detective. "Come on, Mike, let's get going. I guess Vettori don't know nothing about it."

The two of them walked slowly to the door. The big one turned.

"Say, Vettori," he said, "did you hear the news?"

Vettori looked up.

"What news?"

"Why, some rat bumped Cap Courtney off over at the Casa Alvarado."

"Yeah?" said Vettori, "some guys are sure careles with the lead. That's a tough break."

The young detective opened the door and they started out.

"Ain't it?" said the big one. "Well, so long."

As soon as the door closed, Vettori went over and shot the bolt, then peeped out through the shutter. Rico came out of his hiding place.

"Listen, Sam," he said, "I'm gonna let a guy pull a gat on me. What the hell! Any more of them crooks and this is my last job."

Vettori made an elaborate, tragic gesture.

"Yeah, you bet this is your last job."

Joe took off his derby and put it beside him on the table. His face was dead white.

"You said it," said Joe, "they'll get us sure for this."

Vettori shook his big head slowly from side to side.

"They'll get us dead sure for this."

Rico began to comb his hair.

"Maybe you better go over and give yourself up," he said; then dropping his sarcastic tone, "listen, how the hell they gonna get us? Why, you're the finest bunch of yellow rats I ever seen."

"Not me," said Otero.

Joe tried to smile.

"Wait till you see the papers."

Rico came over and leaned on the table.

"Listen, don't they always play that stuff up in the papers. Courtney's the only guy in the place that ever seen three of us before. Come on, snap out of it. And split the dough."

But Vettori sat inert, mopping his face. Suddenly he asked:

"Where's Tony?"

"He's dicking the car," said Rico. "Suppose they pick him up?"

Rico began to open the sacks.

"That'll be just too bad," said Joe.

Rico laughed.

"A fine bunch of yeggs!"

Vettori got to his feet in a fury.

"You, Rico! Shut your mouth. You think I want to hang because you get yellow and shoot somebody?"

Rico, very calm, put his hand in his pocket and said:

"Sam, you get funny with me and you won't get no split at all. Only a horseshoe wreath."

"Oh, hell, Sam," said Joe, "we're all in it, ain't we? Come on, split the dough."

Vettori sat down. Otero stood a little behind him, watching.

"Since you want it, Sam," said Rico, his face pale and drawn, "you're gonna get it. Listen, you split even, that's all. Hear me! You get an even split."

Vettori said nothing. Joe sat rigid, ready to dive under the table. For months Scabby had been predicting this break; now it had come. Joe feared Vettori and Rico equally, but something told him that Rico would win.

Vettori let his hands fall on the table.

"All right, Rico," he said, "I split even. Sit down and we'll divvy."

But Rico didn't move.

"You got a gun on you, Sam?" he asked.

Vettori looked up at him.

"Sure I got a gun on me."

"Well, don't try to use it."

"No," said Otero, "don't try to use it."

Vettori's face went slack. He sat tapping on the table with his fat fingers.

"Rico," he said, finally, "I split even on the square."

Rico's victory was complete. Joe looked at him with admiration. Sam was a tough bird, but Rico was tougher.

Vettori put up, walked across the room and stood looking out the window.

Joe handed Rico a sheet of paper full of figures. Rico read: $331.75.

"All right," said Rico, "split it five ways and we'll make up Scabby's split between us."

Otero sat with his chair tipped back against the wall, smoking a cigarette with his eyes closed. Vettori was playing solitaire and swearing softly to himself.

Joe looked at his watch.

"Quarter till. I got to beat it. Say, Sam, call Carilio and let him get me a cab, will you?"

Sam heaved himself to his feet and called Carilio. In a moment the bouncer put his flattened face in the door.

"Three dicks downstairs, boss?" "Who are they?" asked Vettori.

"Flaherty and two guys I don't know, boss. They want to see you."

Vettori stood looking at the floor. Carilio jumped in and shut the door.

"Hell," he said, "they're coming up."

Rico leapt to his feet, ran across the room and opened a panel in the wall.

"Come on, Joe," he said "you can slip out the back way. Stay where you are, Otero, and go right on smoking. Send Joe's cab around in the alley, Sam."

"You suppose they know something, Rico?"

"Not unless they picked Tony up. You don't know nothing, Sam, see? I'll be right here listening, and if there's any trouble, why, it'll be two only on state occasions."

Vettori scooped up the money, wrapped his coat around it, and handed it to Rico. Joe went through the panel, followed by Rico. There was a knock at the door.

Vettori rolled and Carilio opened the door. Two plain-clothes men stepped in and stood looking around the room. One was tall and burly in a huge ulster; the other was short and very young. They both had their right hands in their overcoat pockets.

"All right, Carilio," said Vettori, "go ahead. That's all."

"Wait a minute," said the burly one. "tell Flaherty we'll be down in

LISTENING IN

By BERT BROCKBANK
Radio Editor

FOR the last six months Rear Admiral Philip Andrews, commandant of the First Naval District has been endeavoring to secure better protection to fishermen along the coast of New England from sudden changes in weather, which have caused so many fatalities during the past 50 years. He has now succeeded in arranging for special radio broadcasts from station WEPS at Gloucester, which together with weather broadcasts from WEEI, WNAC, WBZ, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick stations, and station NAA at Arlington, will furnish fishermen with current weather conditions on the fishing grounds at all times.

THIS new service, of incalculable value, will be put into effect within the next few days. The WEPS broadcast will be for the sole benefit of fishermen, and will be given daily by George A. Loveland, chief of the United States Weather Bureau. Following this broadcast other stations will give the amplified weather forecasts applicable to the needs of the fishermen on the banks. In the establishment of this new service, Rear Admiral Andrews has had the hearty co-operation of U. S. Senator David I. Walsh, Charles B. Graves of Marblehead, the Gloucester Chamber of Commerce, William C. Adams, State director of fisheries, A. L. Millet of the Bureau of Fisheries, and the larger fish companies in Boston.

Sandy MacFarlane will have a large audience listening in when he returns to WBZ at 8:30 this evening in the first of a series of 16 weekly programs. Since Sandy's last broadcast over a Boston station he has made a tour of eastern states and Canada and reports of his reception were highly flattering. In Montreal a contingent of the Black Watch regiment met him at the station, escorted and banqueted him and escorted him to the studios of CFCF for his broadcast. The Boston Pipe Band, under direction of Pipe Majors Jock Cameron and George B. Smith, will also be heard.

A SUICIDE pact was the theory held by neighbors of Mrs. Miller and David Eckroth in accounting for their deaths. Murder and suicide was the coroner's verdict. Sergt. James J. Regan of the Pennsylvania state police declared it was a double murder; the dead man's rumpled coat—his unnatural position—pointed clearly to death by a third and unknown party. Who was the murderer? Was it the son of the murdered man, the husband of the murdered woman, or some unplaced assailant? The solution comes in the True Detective Mystery program of WNAC tonight when "The Case of the Crumpled Coat" is presented in the Macfadden hour.

The songs of Irving Berlin that made the "Music Box of 1922" one of Broadway's most famous productions, will be specially featured in tonight's Atwater Kent mid-week program through WBZ and associated N. B. C. stations. The Berlin music was hailed as a departure from the usual, and most of the numbers were soon sung and whistled and danced to throughout the world.

A NEW series of weekly programs presenting popular stars, will be inaugurated tonight when the Fleischmann Sunshine Hour returns to the air over WEEI and a coast-to-coast network. The artists appearing at this premier include Gene Austin, stage star and radio tenor; George Gershwin, composer; The Cavaliers, male quartet; Welcome Lewis, musical comedy star and "crooner"; Alvin Simmons, colored porter and hat-check boy, and Ben Pollack's orchestra. Listeners in will be interested to know that, involved about the stillers of illicit liquor and the revenue men sent to apprehend them, and the furnishes excellent opportunity for members of the Maybelle's cast.

"FROM Russia, where life throbs from the moods of love and ecstasy to those of hate and despair, comes selections which the "Around the World with Libby" concert ensemble will present through WEEI. Well known concert artists appear with the Libby ensemble for the first time. Ivan Ivantzoff, baritone, sings Moussorgsky's humorous "Song of the Flea" and Gretchaninoff's wistful "Song of the Traveler, "Over the Steppes." Leon Tumarkin, pianist, will play "Variation on a Theme" by Glinka, and Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor." The program follows:

County Jail System a Curse

Indifference of Too Many Members of Federal Judiciary Partly to Blame

In the prevention of crime, in the reform of criminals and even in its treatment of youthful offenders the United States is one of the most backward of the so-called great nations.

And our federal government is far behind the governments of some of the states in its shocking neglect of the whole prison problem.

England, for example, abolished the county jail MORE THAN FIFTY YEARS AGO. And soon after her local prisons came under the control of the central government a steady decline in the prison population of England set in.

But the county jail system which the United States inherited from England more than a century ago still curses nearly every state in the federal union today.

And what is worse this vicious system draws a large annual subsidy from the federal government in the form of board for federal prisoners.

Half the eighteen thousand prisoners committed by the federal courts are today boarded in county jails or local prisons and workhouses over which the federal government has no control and about which it has almost no knowledge.

Next to the overcrowding of federal penitentiaries and the idleness forced upon thousands of their inmates, the survival of the county jail system in the United States is one of the things that most shocks experts from the old world who come to visit American prisons.

Instead of encouraging the several states to follow the example of England and Canada and other enlightened countries that have long ago abolished the county jail system, THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IS HELPING BY ITS SUBSIDY TO FASTEN THIS VICIOUS SYSTEM ON THE SEVERAL STATES.

It is true that under existing conditions there is not enough space in federal penitentiaries for all federal prisoners. Nor will there be until the probation and parole systems are extended, new institutions built and the number of jail offenses on our statute books reduced.

BUT IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO WAIT UNTIL THAT DISTANT AND INDEFINITE DATE TO END MANY OF THE EVILS OF THE COUNTY JAIL SYSTEM FOR WHICH THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IS TO BLAME.

No federal judge ought to be permitted to sentence any federal prisoner to a non-federal institution beyond the control of the federal government until he is satisfied that the punishment he imposes is not going to be increased by the brutal treatment and inhuman conditions to which many federal prisoners in county jails and local prisons are subjected today.

It is the indifference of too many members of the federal judiciary to the shocking conditions under which prisoners committed by them are confined that is partly to blame for much of the viciousness in the county jail system today.

All federal prisoners should be confined in federal institutions under the complete control of the federal government as soon as room can be provided for them.

But in the meantime federal prisoners in non-federal institutions are entitled to the protection of the federal government.

Not only changes in the law are necessary to provide this protection but also a complete change in the attitude of the federal judiciary toward the whole penal problem.

Japan Watchful, Wise

She Goes on BUILDING.

(Copyright, 1929)

Our wise Asiatic friends, the Japanese, have an admirable capacity for watching and waiting.

They watched and waited during the big war, AFTER they had taken what they needed in their immediate neighborhood.

They sent intelligent Japanese soldiers and sailors as "observers" to watch and learn in Europe. But THEY didn't get into the war.

Now Japan is watching and waiting while Great Britain and the United States make "peace gestures" and stop cruiser building. But Japan isn't stopping ANYTHING, and goes right ahead with a program of eight new cruisers of 10,000 tons each.

Japanese newspapers praise President Hoover and Ramsay MacDonald for not building and for their peaceful action. BUT WISE JAPAN BUILDS.

If You Marry a Fair Queen

Be Cautious, and Faithful

(Copyright, 1929)

If you marry a beauty queen, treat her as a beauty queen should be treated.

The Mexican General Moises Vidal married Senora Tersea de Landa, crowned "Miss Mexico," in 1928, at the Galveston beauty contest.

"Miss Mexico" found that her husband had been married before, took his army pistol, shot him six times, then lying on his corpse cried: "I loved him dearly." She's in jail, to be tried for murder.

You can't win a beauty prize without having some temperament, especially in Mexico.

ONCE-OVERS

YOU may be one of the many thousands who are censuring the youth of the present time.

To be honest, didn't you as a young person do about as young people do today? They do much in public that you sought to do in darkened "parlor" or while out "buggy-riding."

Is it any worse to be open in such actions than to be sly about it?

Of course, as a middle-aged person, you may look upon "necking" as disgusting to your sense of propriety. But when you were young there were many "necking parties by the front gate or on the side porch or down under the old apple tree where the hammock was.

And your grandparents were sure you were going to the dogs because of the actions of your generation.

You think of your youth as conservative in comparison to the youth of today. But young people everywhere feel as sure of themselves as you did. They don't feel that they are doing anything wrong. They may be much more wholesome in what they do than you were in what you did. Their ideals may be higher and more strict when deciding the limit at which to stop.

Ain't It the Truth?

A German Burglar Hunt

Our Police Do It More Simply

(Copyright, 1929)

GERMAN POLICE CHASING "CAT BURGLARS"

This picture interests Americans, particularly American policemen.

It shows "cat burglars," the kind that climb to balconies and windows, fleeing over roofs in Berlin, chased by German policemen. You see the latter in full uniform, above, in the rear.

It is an actual photograph, taken by a newspaper reporter who happened along as the cat burglars came in sight as shown here.

As a believer in law and order, you will be glad to hear that the German policemen got the burglars, risking broken legs in a dangerous pursuit.

They overtook them and caught them, BY HAND.

Our American police would operate more simply. They would tell the men to stop, hold up their hands. If they didn't obey, they would shoot, and drop them into the yard.

They don't do that in Germany, where they are fussy about human life and rights, even when thieves are concerned.

Inasmuch as the penalty for burglary is not death, Berlin law will not allow the police to inflict death on a suspected burglar, except in self-defense.

And, curiously enough, there are in Germany not nearly as many crimes or professional criminals as there are in the United States. As for murders, that has almost become a United States specialty, one in which we eclipse all nations, as President Hoover recently pointed out.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

THE baseball season is going into its September tailspin with both New York teams spurting like a scow on a mud bank.

This is tough business for Manhattan. But glorious details for the rest of the nation.

Every time the Giants or the Yanks are knocked off there is rejoicing throughout the length and woof of the land.

The name of McGraw is a laughing epitaph in Cincinnati and Philadelphia. John is a Napoleon with seven Elbas.

The Yanks are popular because of Ruth. They love the Babe at the bat when his name is Casey.

It's a holiday in Detroit when the Babe semaphores three times and then sits down on his sliding pads in disgrace.

We will miss the oldtimers who chewed the fat in the hotel lobbies.

All World Series are played in hotel lobbies. We will never forget the day that Kid Gleason was illustrating how a man should have been tussed out at home. The kid threw a ten thousand dollar statuette through a French mirror big enough for a giraff to use as a shaving glass.

It was fortunate for a man that the Kid did this for the house detectives met with no resistance when he followed the statuette through the silvered windshield.

And another lobby incident we will never forget was when a naval lieutenant went around shaking hands with the pennant winning Giants a few years back. He wore the wings of an aviator.

He wanted to know if any of the Giants wanted to fly up the Potomac that morning. They all politely refused.

His name was Williams. The day before he had broken the world's speed record, flying a hydroplane that looked as safe as an ironing board balanced on a steeple.

His record was over 276 miles an hour in a plane that was stuck together with cigarette papers and chewing gum.

After he had gone without getting any passengers, Damon Runyon turned to us and said, "That guy was a pitcher with the Giants. They let him go because they said he was yellow."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HERE'S a letter from Ma. It may not be conventional editorial material, but I'll wager that it will carry much more kick for most readers than news of the war in China or the racket in France.

Dear Miss Robinson:

I am a mother at 46 and I have at last made my family appreciate me. That should be news!

Have you ever stopped to consider the position of the average mother of 46? To ourselves we are still fairly young women, but to our children we belong to another age, so different is their experience from ours. I suppose children have always felt that their parents were fossils, but the gap between the training of current parents and their children is so great that modern young people believe that anything born prior to 1900 is in a class with the dodo.

Take my own example. I have three children—a son of 25, a daughter of 23 and another 20. They are bright, capable, young people in good positions—smart dressers, clever talkers, very popular. Our simple but comfortable big home is constantly filled with their friends, especially over the week-ends.

My children are good children—we have no "flaming youth" problem—and I am sure they love me. But in the last five years I have noticed a decided falling off in their respect for me AS A WOMAN. Or, perhaps, it would be more accurate to say that, having passed through the blind worship of baby days, THEY FAILED TO GROW INTO RESPECT FOR ME AS A WOMAN.

Instead, they seemed to accept me as a dear, but hopelessly antiquated piece of old furniture, which it was convenient to have around, but which they never accepted very seriously. If I advanced opinions they brushed them aside pleasantly, or impatiently, as the mood might be, and did things to suit themselves. They felt that they had fulfilled their full duty to me if they invited me to an occasional movie or brought me an easy chair.

As this fact dawned upon me, I became both indignant and hurt. As a matter of fact, I'm not the "domestic type." As a girl I had longed to study law, but there were no opportunities so I did he usual thing—fell in love and married. But I never forgot my other interests and it was a real sacrifice for me to devote all my time and energy to my children. IN THEIR YOUTHFUL CONCEIT THEY NEVER DREAMED HOW OFTEN THEY BORED ME TO TEARS. AND NOW I FOUND I WAS BORING THEM.

When I had thought things out, and it took many weeks, I quietly made my plans. I decided to take a fine correspondence course, which would require three evenings of study per week. I also decided to spend alternate week-ends in the neighboring city, attending lectures, seeing good shows, lookin up old friends AND TAKING SOME BEAUTY TREATMENTS. In short, I was going to put myself into circulation again.

It was a trying time. I adore my children—I love to serve them. And it is difficult for any woman of 46 to jar herself out of the ruts into which her life has fallen. I found that, unknowingly, I had become timid, stupid and lazy. I had a terrific task in keeping to my determination. BUT I STUCK.

And today I have won back my children's respect and my husband's interest. I am regarded as an INDIVIDUAL—not merely part of the domestic equipment. I AM EDNA MATHEW—HERSELF—IN PERSON. And I feel 20 years younger and happier. It certainly has paid!

MRS. L. Y. MATHEW.

Well, how does that listen to YOU, mama?

3-Minute Trips

By TEMPLE MANNING

THE Germans are intensely proud of the industrial region that stretches between Bonn and Dusseldorf, and one of my fellow passengers almost wept with joy as he bade me look at the thick pall of smoke that hung over the Ruhr valley that stretches from the Rhine to Westphalia. Coal mines, steel mills and smelting plants are just as beautiful to the German people as scenery and works of art and where I had been previously regaled with legends and stories, I was now crammed with industrial facts and statistics. It was a distinct relief when the towers of Cologne cathedral hove in view.

Cologne is a thriving city of over 700,000 inhabitants, easily the largest and most important city in the Rhineland. Yet with all its modernity, its splendidly equipped airport and big office buildings, there is something Old World about it. Perhaps it is because the being of the city seems to center around the cathedral. It was under the Emperor Charlemagne that Cologne was raised to the dignity of an archbishopric. The foundations of the edifice were begun in 1248, but the building was not actually completed until 1880. Its main porch fronting on the Domplats is 94 feet high, the two main towers that are each 520 feet high, dominate the landscape for miles around. It is like being transported back into the Middle Ages to sit within the Gothic interior, with the light filtering through the painted windows in the northern aisle, while the music of the great bells calls to evensong.

Directly behind the cathedral is the Hohenzollern bridges, one of the three large bridges that connect the city with its suburbs on the right bank.

There is so much to see and visit in and about the city, that one could put in a few weeks pleasantly and profitably making Cologne the headquarters for trips to the surrounding country. A popular trip is to the Eifel Hills with the "Nurburgring," one of Europe's greatest motor speedways, and to Altenberg, with its old abbey church and glass paintings.

But to complete the sags of the Rhine, I am going to resume the journey to Dusseldorf, passing on the way Bonn and Beuralh, both busy little centers of industry. Neuss, a few miles from Dusseldorf, is one of the oldest towns in Germany, but is the last word in factories and mills. The artists in our party do not want to hear anything about factories; they are busily reading their guide books, brushing up their art, for Dusseldorf is one of the world's great art centers and its school of painting draws students from all points of the compass.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—Broadway, so bright with lights of success, completely banishes its wraith-like shadows of failure. Yet in the background are always those who stormed the street with star dust in their eyes—snatched at success and missed. But never lost hope.

They cling desperately to the street, despising nothing so much as failure. Those riding high waves are not interested in those eddied on the barren shoals. If one cannot stem the tide in the swift current he must expect least of all sympathy.

It is Broadway to live for the day and live high. Nothing is so important as the eternal now. Nothing so unimportant as the past. Only last evening I saw a human wreck shuffle in from a side street with outstretched pencils. No one apparently recognized him as a matinee idol of 20 years ago.

Any number of waiters—no one ever sees a waiter's face—between Herald sq. and the Circle were once high rolling wastrels but now gleaners along the way that is white. Every chop house and speakeasy has habitues, once affluent, who are cadging and awaiting the breaks.

A famous architect is one of the whining beggars who pops out of side street doorways. A stage doorman once "angeled" a beautiful actress in the same theater whose stage door he now guards. Those silver haired cashiers in night restaurants are often men of affairs who are hiding.

Around midnight in that strip of areaway known as Shubert Alley in 44th st., there frequently collect faded flower women in cotton gloves, seedy panhandlers, sellers of curb toys and such—many of whom can honestly boast of days when Broadway was, as the saying goes, at their feet.

Sometimes those beaten and discarded by Broadway drift temporarily to the Bowery to escape recognition, but in a little while, when they think Broadway has forgotten, they wing back, like proverbial moths, to the flame. The old song observed Broadway is a wonderful street going up—but going down take Sixth Ave. How true!

One block and one white pearl are slated for popularity with full evening dress for the coming winter. It is sponsored by Michael Arlen, who couldn't match studs when in a hurry one evening to attend a London dinner party, and the idea was a hit with the bloods. And have you seen the new forked end dinner coat ties?

A famous figure, now little recognized, is seen frequently on Broadway these days. Gaping crowds at his heels once blocked traffic, but now few heads turn. He is Jack Johnson, known best by the lamented Ted's tag of "Li'l Artha." The pugilist has grown paunchy, but his figure is fairly erect for one of 52.

Things have not gone well with Johnson in the past 30 years. About the last long ago he sailed for Europe with cameras clicking and crowds huzzahing. In his entourage were a white secretary, a white valet and three sporty automobiles. He spent money like a sailor in port on a spree.

After evading prosecution for seven years by living abroad, he finally served ten months in Leavenworth for violating the Mann act. This was the beginning of the end of his glory. When he left prison, the glamor was gone. He was definitely out of the picture.

Johnson lives in Harlem and is frequently at fights. He boxes now and then, but mostly in the west and middle west, where his name is a greater attraction. Almost every day he goes to a gym on Leonx avenue for a work-out. He still thinks he can lick Jack Dempsey.

That rather incongruous strip in fashionable Park ave. so long occupied by the Railway Y. M. C. A. has succumbed to the wrecking raiders. On the site will rise the new Waldorf-Astoria hotel. The place was chiefly famous for its checker tournaments. Railroad men are said to be the best checker players of all, and many excell also at chess. Two of the champion trainmen checker players have never been able to meet on account of their working schedules.

From a department store ad: "Husbands should be good sports and stand quietly waiting in a corner while wives are shopping."

Yeah? And have a window decorator slip up and begin pinning dress goods on you.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Speech was given to the ordinary sort of men, whereby to communicate their mind; but to wise men whereby to conceal it.

No civilization is complete which does not include the dumb and defenseless of God's creatures within the sphere of charity and mercy.
—Victoria.

It is worthy of praise for a man, of great social position and of very great wealth, to bring up his children as a worthy memorial of his family and of himself.
